ITALIAN PRESS SUPPORTS AUSTRIA

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Rome, July 25.—Government newspapers carried "inspired" articles today upholding Austria in her peremptory demands upon Servia for satisfaction. These papers hinted at black intrigues engineered in Belgrade against the peace of Europe.

According to certain political writers in Rome, Servia is trying to precipitate a European conflict with a view to weakening Austria so that the Servian government can annex Bosnia and Herzegovina, the two big tracts of land seized by Austria from Turkey in 1908.

While the Italian government is openly espousing the cause of Austria it is certain that Italy would oppose Austrian encroachment on the eastern shores of the Adriatic if war should follow and Servia would be overwhelmed.

The entire situation is so complicated that it is difficult to see what re-alignment of European forces would follow in the event of hostilities.

Despite the pro-Austrian sentiment in many quarters, powerful members of the Italian government are working for a peaceful solution of the trouble.

In diplomatic circles the feeling prevails that war will be averted.

His Arm Broken.

Augustus Hargraves, of lower Broadway, while riding on a grocery wagon in New York city a few days ago, was thrown out and his arm below the elbow was broken. Mr. Hargraves will be forced to carry his arm in a sling for the next few days.

Stricken With Apoplexy.

Mrs. Rose, mother of A. D. Rose of St. James street, was stricken with apoplexy on Wednesday afternoon. She is being attended by Dr. W. E. E. Little, and this morning is slightly improved.

SERVIAN TROOPS ARE VERY ACTIVE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Belgrade, July 25.—There was a meeting of the Servian cabinet today at which the ultimatum from Vienna was discussed at length.

Afterwards orders were given for heavy troop movements toward the south. Crown Prince Alexander, who is ruling in the temporary absence of King Peter, held a council with the officers of the general staff.

Reports that the garrison had been ordered to evacuate the capital were denied, but no official explanation of the troop movement was given. Trains bearing artillery and ammunition left for the south.

Premier Pachich refused to say what conclusion had been reached by the ministry but admitted that Servia "Is facing a situation of the utmost gravity."

Excitement is at fever heat. Crowds paraded the streets during the day and called upon the government to defy Austria. Members of the Pan Slavic Union, the powerful organization of Slavs which extends into Russia and Hungary, are calling for war. Leaders of this great organization declared that, if war is declared, all Slavs will stand together and that the pro-Servians in Bosnia, Herzegovina and Hungary will rise against Austria.

Servian flags decorate all the buildings. The military guard at the Belgrade end of the international bridge, across the Danube, has been strengthened. The Danube is heavily mined. Heavy cannon are trained upon the bridge. Servian officials whose duty it is to board the passenger trains on the Orient railway, that pass through Belgrade from Vienna, exercised the most extraordinary precautions in questioning travellers and searching baggage.

Conservatives, who realize that Servia would be helpless in a war against Austria, with the latter nation supported by Italy and Germany, pleaded with the members of the government to give a pacific answer to Austria. Their program is to answer the ultimatum with a double reply, the first to be made this evening; the second to follow later.

It is very likely that an affirmative reply to the ultimatum, while saving Servia from war, would cause a downfall of the present government. Such an answer would pledge Servia to do the following things:

"Curb its ambition for a greater Servian empire, including Bosnia and Herzegovina; make apology to Austria; suppress the Pan Slavic movement; investigate the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand officially, and arrest all who may have been connected with the plot even in a remote way.

King Peter, who recently retired from active rulership because of ill health, is opposed to war unless Servia is assured of powerful outside help.

NUGGETS OF NEWS.

Unusual and Striking Occurences in Many Places Briefly Noted.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Boston—"Get rid of the mice or we strike." This ultimatum was delivered by the women operators at the Dorchester Telephone Exchange. They insist the building must be rid of the rodents.

New York—Outdoor life kept them healthy and they were too happy to quarrel. This is the happiness secret of Mr. and Mrs. James Dayton, who just celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Seeking to emulate a high diving feat he had witnessed, Francis Peters crawled to the branches of a high tree and made a "dive of death" in a pond. His friends had tried to stop him.

Kublar, Colo.—James Sheen was reunited to his sweetheart of 35 years ago, Miss Amy Dodd, whom he had thought dead, when a runaway accident brought them together.

New York—Girl candlers may take the places of strikers who have quit. Produce merchants are seriously thinking of employing girls to handle the barnyard product.

Sampson Would be Judge.

Isidor Sampson, the uptown lawyer, is looking for the nomination for judge of the city court on the Democratic ticket to be voted at the fall election and he has obtained the necessary number of signatures to a petition to be placed on the primary ballot. It is understood that Mr. Sampson intends to file the petition as soon as he is permitted by law. It is said that there are also several other Democratic lawyers who are looking for the office of city judge, but Mr. Sampson is the first one who has circulated a petition and secured the necessary number of signers.

The lighting system and motors for the new Fessenden Shirt Factory which will occupy the industrial building on Cornell street, have been installed by Michael R. Flick, and the business is about ready to start up. The work of putting the new machinery in place has been going on for some time and Mr. Fessenden says that they are hoping to start up in a few weeks.

St. James's Sunday School Outing.

Next Wednesday the St. James M. E. The excursion promises to be one of the most successful of the season.

NEWEST PHOTOGRAPH OF MME. CAILLAUX.

Mme. Joseph Caillaux, the letters written to whom by her husband, Joseph Caillaux, while she was still the wife of another man, were responsible for the murder of Gaston Calmette. Mme. Caillaux is now on trial in Paris for that murder. Calmette purchased these letters and was publishing them one at a time in his paper Le Figaro. It was the fear that letters that might injure her husband's character would later be published that drove Mme. Caillaux to committ her terrible crime.

FRENCH PRESS AGAINST AUSTRIA

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, July 25.—The peremptory manner in which Austria called upon Servia for redress and the shortness of time given the Belgrade government to answer Emperor Francis Joseph's ultimatum, was condemned by the French press today.

President Poincare is expected to curtail his official visit to Russia and hurry home because of the grave international situation.

Baron Van Schoen, the German ambassador to France, has broken off his vacation in Bavaria and hurried to Paris.

There are strong evidences that Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign minister, will ask France to co-operate in efforts to prevent war. Sir Edward was the dominating figure in international politics during the critical days of the two Balkan wars and it was largely through his efforts that the conflagration was confined to the Balkans.

European Markets Demoralized.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, July 25.—The Bourses of Europe were demoralized today by the war rumors from Vienna and Belgrade. In London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna prices of securities were lower as the result of frenzied selling. Private advices from the European capitals indicated that there would be a peaceful settlement and that war would be averted, but these failed to allay the alarm of traders whose fears had been aroused by sensational articles in the "yellow press."

Another Bubonic Plague Victim.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New Orleans, La., July 25.—The authorities redoubled their crusade against rats today following the discovery of the tenth bubonic plague victim. The latest sufferer is William Ernst, 50, employed in a saloon located almost in the center of the infected district.

OTIS DISCHARGE IN BANKRUPTCY

Amos Van Etten, referee in bankruptcy, to whom the matter of the discharge of Henry W. Otis and Burt D. Otis was referred to as special master to make and report the facts with his opinion, has decided that the bankrupts are entitled to be discharged. Several creditors filed objections to the discharge of Mr. Otis and his son, among them the Troy Trust Company of Troy, N. Y., who alleged that Burt D. Otis made a false statement in writing as to the assets of the firm, and on account of such false statement the Troy Trust Company loaned certain money to one Joseph A. Taylor, who claimed to have power of attorney from Burt D. Otis to transact all business in his name for the firm of H. W. Otis & Son. They also charged that the firm failed to keep books of account; that they transferred real estate to defraud creditors; that they concealed certain of their property, and made untruthful answers to the material questions on the examination before the referee The case was tried before Amos Van Etten, as special master. D. G. Atkins, attorney for the bankrupts, claimed that the specifications filed by the Troy Trust Company and other creditors were insufficient, vague, indefinite and uncertain; that they did not specify facts which constitute legal ground for the court to deny a discharge to the bankrupts and that they did not specify any legal objections to the bankrupts' discharge. The referee has sustained most of the exceptions taken by Mr. Atkins, and the other specifications the objecting creditor failed to prove. D. G. Atkins was attorney for Henry W. Otis and Burt D. Otis and Frank H. Deal, attorney for the Troy Trust Company. The statement signed by Burt D. Otis was that the company had assets of $115,500 and their liabilities did not exceed $26,860.

TRAIN ROBBERS MURDER FOR $23

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New Orleans, La., July 25.—Posses scoured the swamps east of here today for traces of two armed bandits who held up the New York Limited flyer of the Louisville and Nashville railroad about midnight and escaped after shooting and killing Thomas Eglin, a brakeman, and robbing the conductor and a passenger of $23.

The robbers boarded the observation car and were preparing to go through the train when armed passengers opened fire. The men swung off the train into the darkness but fired half a dozen shots which drove the passengers to cover.

Policemen and railroad detectives were rushed on a special train from here to the scene. So far no trace of the bandits has been found.

JUDGES CHALLENGE ONE ANOTHER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, July 25.—The climax of the melodramatic thrills which have accompanied the trial of Mme. Henriette Caillaux for the murder of Gaston Calmette, came today when Judge Louis Albanel, president of the assize court, challenged one of his associates to a duel and the defendant collapsed in court.

Judge Albanel, incensed at insinuations of Associate Judge Louis Dagoury, that he had acted with partiality in deciding the issue of the private Calmette letters, sent his seconds to Dagoury demanding an apology or else satisfaction on the field of honor.

Judge Albanel's seconds are General Jules Dalstein, former military governor of Paris, and Emile Bruneau de Labori.

Mme. Caillaux was wan and weak when she was led into court for the sixth days' session of her trial. She had to be assisted to her chair and trembled violently.

Immediately after court convened Judge Albanel ruled that the famous and mysterious Caillaux letters, about which a long fight raged yesterday, should be read.

In making this ruling, however, Judge Albanel established certain conditions:

Maitre Fernand Labori announced this condition which was that only parts of the correspondence which are pertinent should be read into the record.

"Those parts which would bring a blush to the faces of the spectators, will be omitted," said Labori.

The reading of the letters was commenced but almost immediately was interrupted by Mme. Caillaux, who fell from the chair in a faint.

She was carried insensible to the basement quarters of the Palace of Justice, where medical aid was given her.

Attracted by the possibility of the reading of the now famous letters, a bigger crowd than usual attempted to storm the doors of the Palace of Justice. The Republican guards had to fight vigorously to keep them from swarming into the building.

Women fought with the men for places of vantage near the door.

The court room was more than usually crowded, even the aisles being filled. The corridor was filled with women of fashion.

Every ear was strained during the reading of the letters. Before many passages had been disclosed it was evident that those who went to court to satisfy salacious curiosity were going to be well repaid.

Even though M. Labori promised to delete those parts which might cause a blush, the portions which were read were of a most intimate character and couched in the most passionate terms.

The face of M. Caillaux during the reading of the letters was a study. He kept his eyes glued upon Labori, cupping his hand behind his ear so that he might hear the better. When Mme. Caillaux fainted, her husband was one of the first to reach her side. He lifted her tenderly in his arms and kissed her.

Court was adjourned for half an hour to give Mme. Caillaux time to recover.

Runaway but No Damage.

This morning there was an exciting runaway on Broadway when a team of horses being tried out by Elmer Palen and another man became frightened near the West Shore crossing and ran away At full speed the horses dashed up the street, narrowly missing several vehicles that were on the main thoroughfare, while Mr. Palen and his companion each grasped a rein and sawed vainly on the lines in an effort to stop the maddened animals. As the team approached the fruit store of A. H. Gildersleeve he saw them coming and picking up a stick of wood jumped in front of the horses and began to belabor their sides and as the horses slackened their speed somewhat he jumped and grasped them by the bit, bringing them to a halt. Nothing was damaged by the runaway and no one was injured.

WARBURG TO BE WITHDRAWN

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, July 25.—The withdrawal of the nomination of Paul M. Warburg of New York as a member of the Federal Reserve Board not later than next Tuesday or Wednesday was predicted today by Democratic senators in touch with the White House.

This forecast followed reports that President Wilson had served notice on Warburg that he either must ask to be dropped from the list or agree to come at once before the senate banking and currency committee.

The return today of Chairman Owen, of the committee from Europe, following the withdrawal of the Jones' nomination brings the whole affair to a climax. Dramatic campaign exigencies are considered by the party leaders to require an immediate solution of the trouble. The board must be filled and set at work without further delay they say. Consequently, Senators Hitchcock and Reed look for the announcement that Warburg has declined to submit to their examination.

It was evident in the senate today that no recent move on the part of the president has been more popular than his quick acceptance of Jones's withdrawal for it ended what promised to be a long and bitter struggle.

Warburg, a partner in the banking house of Kuhn, Loeb and Company, is regarded kindly by a large section of the Republican membership of the senate and he is accepted by the administration Democrats because he is the president's choice. Nevertheless it appeared today that the same feeling of relief would be expressed upon his withdrawal as upon that of Jones.

CLEARY DEFENSE MAY BE BRAINSTORM

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New City, N. Y., July 25.—Public feeling has been aroused to a high pitch against William V. Cleary, town clerk of Haverstraw, N. Y., who shot and killed his 18 year old s[illegible] Eugene M. Newman, and [illegible]s were stationed in the [illegible] jail today to safeguard [illegible]er.

[illegible]er, Cleary, who has been [illegible]ent in politics in Rockland county for 14 years, has many wealthy and influential friends and they are rallying to his support. The prisoner will have powerful political influence in his favor and unlimited financial support when he is placed on trial.

Friends have advised Cleary to abandon the "unwritten law" plea. The contention of Cleary will probably be that he was the victim of a "brain-storm" when he shot and killed Newman on Thursday, and was irresponsible.

Raging in his cell, Cleary still insists that he killed Newman because Newman had wronged his 18-year-old daughter, Anna Cleary. Cleary's rage against Newman was not ameliorated by the fact that the young people had got married.

There is a division of opinion as to whether Cleary knew at the time of the shooting that Newman was his son-in-law However, Mrs. Mary Kennedy, grandmother of the victim, declared positively today that Cleary must certainly have known of the marriage.

"Eugene came to my home and telephoned to the Cleary residence" said Mrs. Kennedy. "He asked to talk with his wife but was told she was ill in bed. Then he spoke to Mrs. Cleary and told her he had married her daughter, Anna. Mrs. Cleary told him that her husband already knew of the wedding. She advised my grandson, however, to go see Cleary at once and made a clean breast of it. There is not the least doubt that Cleary knew he was killing his own son-in-law when he shot."

Companions of Cleary on the afternoon of the shooting declared that he acted queerly and that his actions were irrational.

TREE SPLINTERED BY LIGHTNING

The inmates of the alms house will not forget the electrical storm of a few nights ago in a hurry as a bolt of lightning narrowly escaped hitting the building and struck the big chestnut tree that stood near the laundry. Splinters measuring from five to six feet in length were torn from the trunk of the tree and hurled over the building. At the time the bolt struck the tree Tom Healey and Frank Eisenberg, who work in the laundry, were sitting in the room talking together when they were suddenly lifted out of their chairs and hurled to the floor of the room. They picked themselves up dazed but uninjured. No one was injured except the tree, which was ruined.

They'll See the Game.

The Industrial Home children will attend the cops-docs baseball game this afternoon at the Athletic Field as the guests of John D. Schoonmaker.

ITALIAN PRESS SUPPORTS AUSTRIA

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Rome, July 25.—Government newspapers carried "inspired" articles today upholding Austria in her peremptory demands upon Servia for satisfaction. These papers hinted at black intrigues engineered in Belgrade against the peace of Europe.

According to certain political writers in Rome, Servia is trying to precipitate a European conflict with a view to weakening Austria so that the Servian government can annex Bosnia and Herzegovina, the two big tracts of land seized by Austria from Turkey in 1908.

While the Italian government is openly espousing the cause of Austria it is certain that Italy would oppose Austrian encroachment on the eastern shores of the Adriatic if war should follow and Servia would be overwhelmed.

The entire situation is so complicated that it is difficult to see what re-alignment of European forces would follow in the event of hostilities.

In diplomatic circles the feeling prevails that war will be averted.

SERVIAN TROOPS ARE VERY ACTIVE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Belgrade, July 25.—There was a meeting of the Servian cabinet today at which the ultimatum from Vienna was discussed at length.

Afterwards orders were given for heavy troop movements toward the south. Crown Prince Alexander, who is ruling in the temporary absence of King Peter, held a council with the officers of the general staff.

Reports that the garrison had been ordered to evacuate the capital were denied, but no official explanation of the troop movement was given. Trains bearing artillery and ammunition left for the south.

Premier Pachich refused to say what conclusion had been reached by the ministry but admitted that Servia "Is facing a situation of the utmost gravity."

Excitement is at fever heat. Crowds paraded the streets during the day and called upon the government to defy Austria. Members of the Pan Slavic Union, the powerful organization of Slavs which extends into Russia and Hungary, are calling for war. Leaders of this great organization declared that, if war is declared, all Slavs will stand together and that the pro-Servians in Bosnia, Herzegovina and Hungary will rise against Austria.

Servian flags decorate all the buildings. The military guard at the Belgrade end of the international bridge, across the Danube, has been strengthened. The Danube is heavily mined. Heavy cannon are trained upon the bridge. Servian officials whose duty it is to board the passenger trains on the Orient railway, that pass through Belgrade from Vienna, exercised the most extraordinary precautions in questioning travellers and searching baggage.

Conservatives, who realize that Servia would be helpless in a war against Austria, with the latter nation supported by Italy and Germany, pleaded with the members of the government to give a pacific answer to Austria. Their program is to answer the ultimatum with a double reply, the first to be made this evening; the second to follow later.

It is very likely that an affirmative reply to the ultimatum, while saving Servia from war, would cause a downfall of the present government. Such an answer would pledge Servia to do the following things:

"Curb its ambition for a greater Servian empire, including Bosnia and Herzegovina; make apology to Austria; suppress the Pan Slavic movement; investigate the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand officially, and arrest all who may have been connected with the plot even in a remote way.

Sampson Would be Judge.

Isidor Sampson, the uptown lawyer, is looking for the nomination for judge of the city court on the Democratic ticket to be voted at the fall election and he has obtained the necessary number of signatures to a petition to be placed on the primary ballot. It is understood that Mr. Sampson intends to file the petition as soon as he is permitted by law. It is said that there are also several other Democratic lawyers who are looking for the office of city judge, but Mr. Sampson is the first one who has circulated a petition and secured the necessary number of signers.

NEWEST PHOTOGRAPH OF MME. CAILLAUX.

Mme. Joseph Caillaux, the letters written to whom by her husband, Joseph Caillaux, while she was still the wife of another man, were responsible for the murder of Gaston Calmette. Mme. Caillaux is now on trial in Paris for that murder. Calmette purchased these letters and was publishing them one at a time in his paper Le Figaro. It was the fear that letters that might injure her husband's character would later be published that drove Mme. Caillaux to committ her terrible crime.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, July 25.—The peremptory manner in which Austria called upon Servia for redress and the shortness of time given the Belgrade government to answer Emperor Francis Joseph's ultimatum, was condemned by the French press today.

Baron Van Schoen, the German ambassador to France, has broken off his vacation in Bavaria and hurried to Paris.

There are strong evidences that Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign minister, will ask France to co-operate in efforts to prevent war. Sir Edward was the dominating figure in international politics during the critical days of the two Balkan wars and it was largely through his efforts that the conflagration was confined to the Balkans.

European Markets Demoralized.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, July 25.—The Bourses of Europe were demoralized today by the war rumors from Vienna and Belgrade. In London, Paris, Berlin and Vienna prices of securities were lower as the result of frenzied selling. Private advices from the European capitals indicated that there would be a peaceful settlement and that war would be averted, but these failed to allay the alarm of traders whose fears had been aroused by sensational articles in the "yellow press."

Another Bubonic Plague Victim.

OTIS DISCHARGE IN BANKRUPTCY

Amos Van Etten, referee in bankruptcy, to whom the matter of the discharge of Henry W. Otis and Burt D. Otis was referred to as special master to make and report the facts with his opinion, has decided that the bankrupts are entitled to be discharged. Several creditors filed objections to the discharge of Mr. Otis and his son, among them the Troy Trust Company of Troy, N. Y., who alleged that Burt D. Otis made a false statement in writing as to the assets of the firm, and on account of such false statement the Troy Trust Company loaned certain money to one Joseph A. Taylor, who claimed to have power of attorney from Burt D. Otis to transact all business in his name for the firm of H. W. Otis & Son. They also charged that the firm failed to keep books of account; that they transferred real estate to defraud creditors; that they concealed certain of their property, and made untruthful answers to the material questions on the examination before the referee The case was tried before Amos Van Etten, as special master. D. G. Atkins, attorney for the bankrupts, claimed that the specifications filed by the Troy Trust Company and other creditors were insufficient, vague, indefinite and uncertain; that they did not specify facts which constitute legal ground for the court to deny a discharge to the bankrupts and that they did not specify any legal objections to the bankrupts' discharge. The referee has sustained most of the exceptions taken by Mr. Atkins, and the other specifications the objecting creditor failed to prove. D. G. Atkins was attorney for Henry W. Otis and Burt D. Otis and Frank H. Deal, attorney for the Troy Trust Company. The statement signed by Burt D. Otis was that the company had assets of $115,500 and their liabilities did not exceed $26,860.

TRAIN ROBBERS MURDER FOR $23

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New Orleans, La., July 25.—Posses scoured the swamps east of here today for traces of two armed bandits who held up the New York Limited flyer of the Louisville and Nashville railroad about midnight and escaped after shooting and killing Thomas Eglin, a brakeman, and robbing the conductor and a passenger of $23.

The robbers boarded the observation car and were preparing to go through the train when armed passengers opened fire. The men swung off the train into the darkness but fired half a dozen shots which drove the passengers to cover.

JUDGES CHALLENGE ONE ANOTHER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, July 25.—The climax of the melodramatic thrills which have accompanied the trial of Mme. Henriette Caillaux for the murder of Gaston Calmette, came today when Judge Louis Albanel, president of the assize court, challenged one of his associates to a duel and the defendant collapsed in court.

Judge Albanel, incensed at insinuations of Associate Judge Louis Dagoury, that he had acted with partiality in deciding the issue of the private Calmette letters, sent his seconds to Dagoury demanding an apology or else satisfaction on the field of honor.

Mme. Caillaux was wan and weak when she was led into court for the sixth days' session of her trial. She had to be assisted to her chair and trembled violently.

Immediately after court convened Judge Albanel ruled that the famous and mysterious Caillaux letters, about which a long fight raged yesterday, should be read.

In making this ruling, however, Judge Albanel established certain conditions.

Maitre Fernand Labori announced this condition which was that only parts of the correspondence which are pertinent should be read into the record.

"Those parts which would bring a blush to the faces of the spectators, will be omitted," said Labori.

The reading of the letters was commenced but almost immediately was interrupted by Mme. Caillaux, who fell from the chair in a faint.

Women fought with the men for places of vantage near the door.

The court room was more than usually crowded, even the aisles being filled. The corridor was filled with women of fashion.

Every ear was strained during the reading of the letters. Before many passages had been disclosed it was evident that those who went to court to satisfy salacious curiosity were going to be well repaid.

Even though M. Labori promised to delete those parts which might cause a blush, the portions which were read were of a most intimate character and couched in the most passionate terms.

The face of M. Caillaux during the reading of the letters was a study. He kept his eyes glued upon Labori, cupping his hand behind his ear so that he might hear the better. When Mme. Caillaux fainted, her husband was one of the first to reach her side. He lifted her tenderly in his arms and kissed her.

Runaway but No Damage.

This morning there was an exciting runaway on Broadway when a team of horses being tried out by Elmer Palen and another man became frightened near the West Shore crossing and ran away At full speed the horses dashed up the street, narrowly missing several vehicles that were on the main thoroughfare, while Mr. Palen and his companion each grasped a rein and sawed vainly on the lines in an effort to stop the maddened animals. As the team approached the fruit store of A. H. Glidersleeve he saw them coming and picking up a stick of wood jumped in front of the horses and began to belabor their sides and as the horses slackened their speed somewhat he jumped and grasped them by the bit, bringing them to a halt. Nothing was damaged by the runaway and no one was injured.

WARBURG TO BE WITHDRAWN

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, July 25.—The withdrawal of the nomination of Paul M. Warburg of New York as a member of the Federal Reserve Board not later than next Tuesday or Wednesday was predicted today by Democratic senators in touch with the White House.

This forecast followed reports that President Wilson had served notice on Warburg that he either must ask to be dropped from the list or agree to come at once before the senate banking and currency committee.

The return today of Chairman Owen, of the committee from Europe, following the withdrawal of the Jones' nomination brings the whole affair to a climax. Dramatic campaign exigencies are considered by the party leaders to require an immediate solution of the trouble. The board must be filled and set at work without further delay they say. Consequently, Senators Hitchcock and Reed look for the announcement that Warburg has declined to submit to their examination.

It was evident in the senate today that no recent move on the part of the president has been more popular than his quick acceptance of Jones's withdrawal for it ended what promised to be a long and bitter struggle.

Warburg, a partner in the banking house of Kuhn, Loeb and Company, is regarded kindly by a large section of the Republican membership of the senate and he is accepted by the administration Democrats because he is the president's choice. Nevertheless it appeared today that the same feeling of relief would be expressed upon his withdrawal as upon that of Jones.

CLEARY DEFENSE MAY BE BRAINSTORM

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New City, N. Y., July 25.—Public feeling has been aroused to a high pitch against William V. Cleary, town clerk of Haverstraw, N. Y., who shot and killed his 18 year old s[illegible] Eugene M. Newman, and [illegible]s were stationed in the N[illegible] jail today to safeguard t[illegible]er.

[illegible]er, Cleary, who has been [illegible]ent in politics in Rockland county for 14 years, has many wealthy and influential friends and they are rallying to his support. The prisoner will have powerful political influence in his favor and unlimited financial support when he is placed on trial.

Friends have advised Cleary to abandon the "unwritten law" plea. The contention of Cleary will probably be that he was the victim of a "brain-storm" when he shot and killed Newman on Thursday, and was irresponsible.

Raging in his cell, Cleary still insists that he killed Newman because Newman had wronged his 18-year-old daughter, Anna Cleary. Cleary's rage against Newman was not ameliorated by the fact that the young people had got married.

There is a division of opinion as to whether Cleary knew at the time of the shooting that Newman was his son-in-law However, Mrs. Mary Kennedy, grandmother of the victim, declared positively today that Cleary must certainly have known of the marriage.

"Eugene came to my home and telephoned to the Cleary residence" said Mrs. Kennedy. "He asked to talk with his wife but was told she was ill in bed. Then he spoke to Mrs. Cleary and told her he had married her daughter, Anna. Mrs. Cleary told him that her husband already knew of the wedding. She advised my grandson, however, to go see Cleary at once and made a clean breast of it. There is not the least doubt that Cleary knew he was killing his own son-in-law when he shot."

Companions of Cleary on the afternoon of the shooting declared that he acted queerly and that his actions were irrational.

TREE SPLINTERED BY LIGHTNING

The inmates of the alms house will not forget the electrical storm of a few nights ago in a hurry as a bolt of lightning narrowly escaped hitting the building and struck the big chestnut tree that stood near the laundry. Splinters measuring from five to six feet in length were torn from the trunk of the tree and hurled over the building. At the time the bolt struck the tree Tom Healey and Frank Eisenberg, who work in the laundry, were sitting in the room talking together when they were suddenly lifted out of their chairs and hurled to the floor of the room. They picked themselves up dazed but uninjured. No one was injured except the tree, which was ruined.

MR. BEDFORD OFFERS FREE SCHOOL SITE

John Union Gillette, district superintendent of schools of the second supervisory district of this county, has been meeting with the trustees of the sixty-five school districts comprising his district at the various town clerk's offices at Wallkill, Gardiner, New Paltz, Highland, Ardonia, Milton and Port Ewen. He reports a general feeling on the part of trustees and citizens for better schools, comfortable buildings and adequate school grounds. As proof of this splendid spirit a copy of a letter received by him follows:

New Rochelle, N, Y., July 21, 1914
Mr. John U. Gillette,
District Superintendent of schools,
Port Ewen, N. Y.

Dear Sir.—I just learned that the State Board of Education had notified Districts No. 6 and No. 10, located in the town of Esopus, county of Ulster, that they would have to build new school houses or combine the two districts and build one new one on another site.

By my writing you at this time, I do not wish to get the state to buy any of my property, but as I attended No. 6, when a boy I have a little sentiment that I would like to see the present and future generation attend school in a better and more pleasant building that I did. As both of the above mentioned districts have a small real estate valuation, it would seem the part of good business to build one good school, just half way between the two old school houses, rather than two small ones, and as I own some property that is located just half way between the old school houses, on a corner, and the present schoolhouse stands, I offer the highway leads from it in three directions, I offer a piece of this corner of suitable size for the building and play ground, free of charge, and furthermore will furnish all the stone for the foundation that is needed that can be drawn from fences only a few hundred feet away from the site and if they find it practical and would be any cheaper, I will furnish the stone for the entire building.

I also have a large spring of pure water located on a hill about 450 feet from the site and if they will lay a pipe to it they can always be supplied with pure water, as the source of supply is high enough to force it to any part of the building.

Hoping that you will pass this matter to the proper authorities for consideration, I remain,

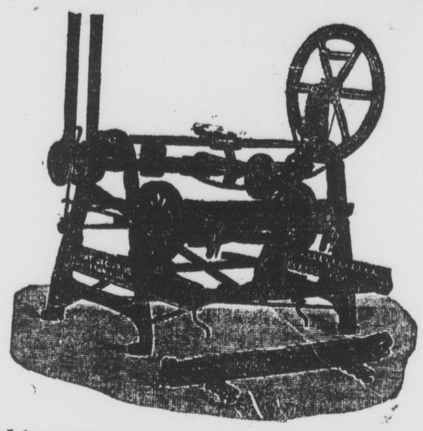

Very truly yours,
A. M. BEDFORD.

Japanese Denied Luxuries.

The most expensive single fruit in the Japanese fruit stores is the natsumikan, a species of grapefruit (Citrus decumana), which sells throughout the winter for 7½ cents each. These are not eaten in great quantities by the class of people who make the great fruit-buying population in the United States. The average income of the Japanese family of four is about $150 a year. This sum does not leave much margin for the purchase of luxuries.

MR. BEDFORD OFFERS FREE SCHOOL SITE

John Union Gillette, district superintendent of schools of the second supervisory district of this county, has been meeting with the trustees of the sixty-five school districts comprising his district at the various town clerk's offices at Wallkill, Gardiner, New Paltz, Highland, Ardonia, Milton and Port Ewen. He reports a general feeling on the part of trustees and citizens for better schools, comfortable buildings and adequate school grounds. As proof of this splendid spirit a copy of a letter received by him follows:

New Rochelle, N, Y., July 21, 1914
Mr. John U. Gillette,
District Superintendent of schools,
Port Ewen, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—I just learned that the State Board of Education had notified Districts No. 6 and No. 10, located in the town of Esopus, county of Ulster, that they would have to build new school houses or combine the two districts and build one new one on another site.

By my writing you at this time, I do not wish to get the state to buy any of my property, but as I attended No. 6, when a boy I have a little sentiment that I would like to see the present and future generation attend school in a better and more pleasant building that I did. As both of the above mentioned districts have a small real estate valuation, it would seem the part of good business to build one good school, just half way between the two old school houses, rather than two small ones, and as I own some property that is located just half way between the old [illegible] houses, on a corner, at the [illegible] highway leads from it in three directions, I offer a piece of this corner of suitable size for the building and play ground, free of charge, and furthermore will furnish all the stone for the foundation that is needed that can be drawn from fences only a few hundred feet away from the site and if they find it practical and would be any cheaper, I will furnish the stone for the entire building.

I also have a large spring of pure water located on a hill about 450 feet from the site and if they will lay a pipe to it they can always be supplied with pure water, as the source of supply is high enough to force it to any part of the building.

Hoping that you will pass this matter to the proper authorities for consideration, I remain,

Very truly yours,
A. M. BEDFORD.

Japanese Denied Luxuries.

The most expensive single fruit in the Japanese fruit stores is the natsumikan, a species of grapefruit (Citrus decumana), which sells throughout the winter for 7½ cents each. These are not eaten in great quantities by the class of people who make the great fruit-buying population in the United States. The average income of the Japanese family of four is about $150 a year. This sum does not leave much margin for the purchase of luxuries.

From "Poor Richard."

When you incline to have new new clothes, look first well over the old ones, and see if you cannot shift with them another year, either by scouring, mending or even patching, if necessary. Remember a patch on your coat and money in your pocket is better and more creditable than a writ on your back and no money to take it off.

To Lovers of the Lawn Beautiful

I am glad to notify you that I have installed in my well equipped shop one of the famous ideal LAWN MOWER GRINDERS and am now able to do that class of work accurately and put your mower in as good cutting shape as the day it left the factory, giving the desired clearance behind the knives, thus reducing the friction, making mowing a pleasure instead of a drudge.

KAUFF RANKS WITH BEST FED HITTERS

Benny Kauff, Hard Hitting Hoosier.

The Feds may not be offering as good a sample of the national pastime as the American and National leagues, but there is one individual enrolled with an outlaw team who doffs his cap to no one. His specialty is hitting, and in that respect he equals any of the famous sluggers in the other circuit, not even excepting Ty Cobb of the Tigers.

This particular player is in our midst today, and is a member of Bill Phillips' Hoofeds. His name is Kauff, Benny Kauff.

Russell Ford, star hurler of the Buffeds, and at one time a member of the New York Yanks, is authority for the above statement. Rus' words may be taken in all seriousness, for the former Highlander has faced Ty Cobb, Joe Jackson, Tris Speaker and the recognized sluggers of the age. When the Buffalo team was here on its last visit, Ford, in an argument as to who was the best hitter, nominated Benny without hesitation. "That fellow," said Ford, "will easily outshine Cobb, Jackson and Speaker. He's a natural hitter and base hits are everyday occurrences with him."

Kauff was lost to organized ball back in the days when Hal Chase was managing the Yankees. Hal had him, but refused to waste time in giving him a thorough trial. Kauff drifted to the New London club, and led the Eastern association with 176 hits in 135 games for a mark of .345. He possessed all of his hitting ability while with the Yanks, and feeling that he was being done an injustice, had no hesitancy in joining the Feds when an offer was made him.

Kauff is the most dangerous hitter in Gilmore's circuit as well as being the best. His work has been a large factor in the success of Bill Phillips' team.

LEON AMES PITCHING WELL

Leon Ames, the former pitcher of the New York Giants, has had a good season with the Cincinnati Reds. The Reds under Manager Charley Herzog have been a surprise in the early stages of the pennant fight and although they have slipped down some of late are bound to finish better than they did last year. Herzog has done well with the material he has on hand and has met with a good reception in Cincinnati. Ames was thought to be all in when McGraw let him out, but his box work since he joined the Reds would indicate that he is far from the end of his string.

Freak of the Bean Ball.

If it hadn't been for a rap on the head by a pitched ball some two years or so ago, Miles Main, the young pitcher who suffered his first defeat of the season against the Red Sox, might have been a partner of Carrigan's star wonder workers, Leonard and Foster, says a Boston writer. Main was at Jersey City when that club was the Red Sox farm, and in the natural course of events would probably have come this way. However, after he was hit on the head his work fell off and he was traded to Buffalo, where he achieved even better results than when on the Sox farm. The bean ball works some queer changes in baseball.

Federal League Blamed.

The Federal league is being blamed by President Lannin of the Red Sox for the slump his team is having. He says that the scouts from the outlaw league have tampered with his players, and they are not playing as well as they might.

Guy Zinn Breaks Leg.

Outfielder Guy Zinn of the Terrapins played with a semipro club in Washington the other day and broke his left leg just above the ankle. He will be out of the game for the rest of the season.

NOTES of the DIAMOND

* * *

* * *

Collie Druhot, a Coast league star of six years ago, is pitching for independent teams around Portland.

* * *

* * *

The Cincinnati Reds, who never had a real scouting department until this year, are now making up for lost time.

* * *

There's one good thing about Charley Herzog the Cincy fans all like. He gives the recruits a chance now and then.

* * *

We are beginning to wonder where the major leagues get all the good players the Feds take away from them.

* * *

Maybe organized baseball regards the Federal league as a mere "psychological illusion;" and again, maybe not.

* * *

Mike Gonzales, the Cincinnati catcher, has been offered the management of the Havana team for the winter season in Cuba.

* * *

Ralph Stroud is being talked of as a big league candidate by Pacific coast critics. He certainly has been pitching grand ball.

* * *

Louisville has purchased two more of Jack Dunn's Baltimore players. Ezra Midkiff and Bert Daniels, former Yankees, are the athletes.

* * *

Rube Oldring, the Athletic outfielder, is the only member of the White Elephant herd who slides head first on his stomach for a base.

* * *

John Titus, the veteran outfielder with the Kansas City Blues, who was hit on the head this spring and nearly killed, is pounding the ball hard.

* * *

Josh Clarke has signed a new outfielder for his Sioux City Indians. His name is Bramble and he batted .349 last year in the Southern Michigan league.

* * *

St. Paul has released the veteran Charley Hemphill outright and it is reported he will take the management of the Fort William team of the Northern league.

KAISER CONFERS NEW TITLE ON SON'S BRIDE-TO-BE.

Countess Ina Marie von Bassewitz-Levetzow and Prince Oskar.

Berlin, July 24.—Although he bitterly opposed the marriage of his fifth son, Prince Oskar, to the Countess Ina von Bassewitz-Levetzow, a woman of lower rank than the Prince, Kaiser Wilhelm has conferred the title of Countess of Ruppin on his son's bride-to-be. This will be known as a morganatic marriage because the countess is not of royal blood.

Chin as Point of Beauty.

The habit of absent mindedly fingering the chin is imprudent because in doing so the skin may be stretched and the pores unduly enlarged, inducing wrinkles and extraneous matter to gather. After the age of twenty-two or twenty-three years it is well to watch with jealous care this particular portion of the face.

Easily Gauged.

Johnny was sent to the cellar to draw a pitcher of cider. When he got back the guest commended him. "You must have good judgment to have filled the pitcher so accurately in the dark without running it over." "Aw, that ain't hard," replied Johnny. "Yer see, when the cider got up to the first joint of my thumb I stopped."

KAUFF RANKS WITH BEST FED HITTERS

Benny Kauff, Hard Hitting Hoosier.

The Feds may not be offering as good a sample of the national pastime as the American and National leagues, but there is one individual enrolled with an outlaw team who doffs his cap to no one. His specialty is hitting, and in that respect he equals any of the famous sluggers in the other circuit, not even excepting Ty Cobb of the Tigers.

This particular player is in our midst today, and is a member of Bill Phillips' Hoofeds. His name is Kauff, Benny Kauff.

Russell Ford, star hurler of the Buffeds, and at one time a member of the New York Yanks, is authority for the above statement. Rus' words may be taken in all seriousness, for the former Highlander has faced Ty Cobb, Joe Jackson, Tris Speaker and the recognized sluggers of the age. When the Buffalo team was here on its last visit, Ford, in an argument as to who was the best hitter, nominated Benny without hesitation. "That fellow," said Ford, "will easily outshine Cobb, Jackson and Speaker. He's a natural hitter and base hits are everyday occurrences with him."

Kauff was lost to organized ball back in the days when Hal Chase was managing the Yankees. Hal had him, but refused to waste time in giving him a thorough trial. Kauff drifted to the New London club, and led the Eastern association with 176 hits in 135 games for a mark of .345. He possessed all of his hitting ability while with the Yanks, and feeling that he was being done an injustice, had no hesitancy in joining the Feds when an offer was made him.

Kauff is the most dangerous hitter in Gilmore's circuit as well as being the best. His work has been a large factor in the success of Bill Phillips' team.

LEON AMES PITCHING WELL

Leon Ames, the former pitcher of the New York Giants, has had a good season with the Cincinnati Reds. The Reds under Manager Charley Herzog have been a surprise in the early stages of the pennant fight and although they have slipped down some of late are bound to finish better than they did last year. Herzog has done well with the material he has on hand and has met with a good reception in Cincinnati. Ames was thought to be all in when McGraw let him out, but his box work since he joined the Reds would indicate that he is far from the end of his string.

Freak of the Bean Ball.

If it hadn't been for a rap on the head by a pitched ball some two years or so ago, Miles Main, the young pitcher who suffered his first defeat of the season against the Red Sox, might have been a partner of Carrigan's star wonder workers, Leonard and Foster, says a Boston writer. Main was at Jersey City when that club was the Red Sox farm, and in the natural course of events would probably have come this way. However, after he was hit on the head his work fell off and he was traded to Buffalo, where he achieved even better results than when on the Sox farm. The bean ball works some queer changes in baseball.

Federal League Blamed.

The Federal league is being blamed by President Lannin of the Red Sox for the slump his team is having. He says that the scouts from the outlaw league have tampered with his players, and they are not playing as well as they might.

Guy Zinn Breaks Leg.

NOTES of the DIAMOND

• • •

• • •

Haven't seen any throwers around the National league that excel Mann of the Braves.

• • •

Collie Druhot, a Coast league star of six years ago, is pitching for independent teams around Portland.

• • •

• • •

The Cincinnati Reds, who never had a real scouting department until this year, are now making up for lost time.

• • •

• • •

• • •

Maybe organized baseball regards the Federal league as a mere "psychological illusion;" and again, maybe not.

• • •

Mike Gonzales, the Cincinnati catcher, has been offered the management of the Havana team for the winter season in Cuba.

• • •

Ralph Stroud is being talked of as a big league candidate by Pacific coast critics. He certainly has been pitching grand ball.

• • •

Louisville has purchased two more of Jack Dunn's Baltimore players. Ezra Midkiff and Bert Daniels, former Yankees, are the athletes.

• • •

Rube Oldring, the Athletic outfielder, is the only member of the White Elephant herd who slides head first on his stomach for a base.

• • •

John Titus, the veteran outfielder with the Kansas City Blues, who was hit on the head this spring and nearly killed, is pounding the ball hard.

• • •

Josh Clarke has signed a new outfielder for his Sioux City Indians. His name is Bramble and he batted .349 last year in the Southern Michigan league.

• • •

St. Paul has released the veteran Charley Hemphill outright and it is reported he will take the management of the Fort William team of the Northern league.

KAISER CONFERS NEW TITLE ON SON'S BRIDE-TO-BE.

Berlin, July 24.—Although he bitterly opposed the marriage of his fifth son, Prince Oskar, to the Countess Ina von Bassewitz-Levetzow, a woman of lower rank than the Prince, Kaiser Wilhelm has conferred the title of Countess of Ruppin on his son's bride-to-be. This will be known as a morganatic marriage because the countess is not of royal blood.

Garden Gains.

Hiram—"Sol Sodbuster claims to have discovered the best way to make money with his garden." Henry—"What's the system?" "This summer he is going to put a house in it." "But isn't he going to raise anything?" "Yes, just as soon as he can he is going to raise the rent."—Youngstown Telegram.

Chin as Point of Beauty.

The habit of absent mindedly fingering the chin is imprudent because in doing so the skin may be stretched and the pores unduly enlarged, inducing wrinkles and extraneous matter to gather. After the age of twenty-two or twenty-three years it is well to watch with jealous care this particular portion of the face.

Easily Gauged.

Johnny was sent to the cellar to draw a pitcher of cider. When he got back the guest commended him. "You must have good judgment to have filled the pitcher so accurately in the dark without running it over." "Aw, that ain't hard," replied Johnny. "Yer see, when the cider got up to the first joint of my thumb I stopped."

FAKED ISSUES.

The popular disposition is to place blame on other people and relieve ourselves of any and all criticism. Someone else is always at fault. Becky Edelson, a recognized "fury" among the I. W. W. horde, who is a counterpart of the "furies" of the English militant suffragettes, is serving a sentence on Blackwell's Island for misbehavior She was legally tried and convicted. She announces her intention of starving herself, or, to borrow a phrase from the English "furies," she will go on a "hunger strike." If she dies, the fault will be not her own, she says, but the fault of the officials. In national affairs the same situation is presented. President Wilson places the blame for failure of his policies on a few Democratic senators; they in turn blame the President. With accusing fingers each points at the other and solemnly assures the public that for all evils, the other is and will continue to be responsible. At Oyster Bay Colonel Roosevelt shouts that if the country had only adopted him and his views, happiness would rule, and he intimates that unless his ideas prevail, the nation and state will have a sorry future.

These are only three of numerous instances, and are cited because they are the most prominently before the public. According to the ideas of these people they cannot be wrong. They must have "issues" or else their cause, in their estimation, fails. "Issues" are not raised until someone has questioned their unqualified statements, and in order that someone will question them, they make their statements strong, and label them as "policies." As soon as doubt, or aspersion, or denial is cast upon their "policies," an "issue" is raised, and an appeal is made to the mass of the American people, who care nothing for their nonsense, to rally to the respective standards and fight. It matters not whether the battle ground is called Armageddon or something else, the principle employed is the same. There is no thought of toleration of other people's views, no thought of give and take, no thought of giving the other fellow a chance.

Egoism and egotism characterize the creeds and the creed-makers, and isms are paramount because their inventors say so. Men who take no interest in the isms are called reactionaries, and the man who becomes disgusted with the spectacle or who prefers to attend to his own business becomes the object of frenzied attack for what the agitators call lack of patriotism. With cranks of this kind it is often a serious thought whether in the event of the failure of their plans, the sun will rise on the morrow or whether the earth will not be shrouded in the darkness which they alone are able to dispel.

"I believe that the judgment and desire of the whole country cry out for a new temper in affairs," says President Wilson in his letter excusing Thomas D. Jones from further candidacy for membership in the Federal Reserve Board. "The time has come," he adds, "when discriminations against particular classes of men should be absolutely laid aside." This makes us think of Frankenstein in the novel who created from dissecting room materials a monster which got away from him and murdered his friend and strangled his bride. Wilson is in much the same predicament. He has had as much to do as anybody in encouraging those Bryan-Roosevelt policies which have fomented mischief and distrust and brought hard times upon the country under conditions which would otherwise insure phenomenal prosperity. Now he awakes to see what he has done. If he had never changed his mind about "knocking Bryan into cocked hat" and had surrounded himself with well-balanced advisers, he could have become the biggest man in recent history instead of degenerating into a sad joke.

It is too bad that the twenty-three Kingston merchants caught violating the law against selling goods on Sunday were let off with a warning instead of being thrown into jail. It is true that nobody's religious calm was disturbed, and nobody knew that the "Sabbath" was being violated until a Democratic spy came down from Albany and nosed around, but that makes no difference. Every law should be enforced with rigor to the end that we will become more careful about sending bigots and fools to the Legislature.

"SUNNY JIM."

(By Our Woman Editor.)

Last November, at the North American Sanitarium in Atlantic City, the twisted little figure of a boy was carefully strapped to a frame, with his back bent into the shape of a bow to correct a spinal affection. When he first was taken to the sanitarium the doctors looked at his funny little face, distorted through a stroke of paralysis, and gravely, pityingly shook their heads, for, at best, they knew that the period of waiting would be discouragingly long.

As the nurse looked down upon the humped back, a bit of an ache stole into her heart and she placed a toy into the lad's arms, softly telling him he must "lie still until he got better." Much to her surprise, the little chap smiled back and radiantly assured her in a baby voice, half Polish, half English, "All light; I'll be good."

And from that day to this he has been the life of the place—"Sunny Jim," they call him.

Doctors draw close to the cot where he lies and they wonder why that wee back must carry such a burden, but "Sunny Jim" looks up into their faces with such a gay little smile and seems to get so much out of living that they go away smiling in spite of themselves, filled with admiration for the brave little fellow.

And so it goes the whole day long, for folk who come to pity are bound to leave with a smile when they view that cheerful young stoic singing and playing as if he was the gladdest little fellow alive.

All day his cot is drawn near to a window which looks over the sea, and he is as bright as the sun which lights up his room. He must stay just where, just how he is placed, but his busy hands can reach out for the toys on his cot, and his active mind devises the most wonderful games.

And, yes, he has a companion—a four-year-old mite whose tubercular leg is bound tight in a cast, and who lies flat on her back with weights hanging on her foot to stretch the little leg. Sometimes the hours drag a bit and then they tell each other stories; and, again, when they are too tired to talk, those two little creatures, cot-bound but not woe-bound, softly hum kindergarten songs and nursery rhymes to keep up the smiles.

"Sunny Jim" has learned a lot of funny tricks and the nurses are charmed with his joy, his bravery and all. And, think of it—nobody leaves his cot without falling under the magic of his dear, ready smile.

Unhappily, his parents are dead, but, happily, he has found foster-parents who love him devotedly, and who are watching every slow little symptom of improvement.

And "Sunny Jim," for the extraordinary "gladness" of him, might well have been another little "Pollyanna," that small maid of Eleanor H. Porter's fancy, instead of a flesh-and-blood boy, having, to the minds of most of folk, very little for which to be glad.

Those who dropped their more serious reading for a brief acquaintance with the small human sunbeam who made a "game" of being glad must almost think that "Sunny Jim" is "Pollyanna" come to life. For, without any intent to make a game of being glad, the brave lad, bound fast to his bed for long months at a time, does exactly what glad little "Pollyanna" accomplished—he sends everyone away from his cot by the window with a growing impulse to smile and be glad. Only, with him, it isn't a game. We recall that poor little "Pollyanna" away off in India with her missionary father, had wished and wished for a doll, and her father had sent her wish abroad. But when the box came from a far-off church at home the little eyes intently looking for the long-coveted and prayed-for doll found only a stiff little pair of crutches, which someone had sent because she hadn't a doll and she really thought that the crutches might come in handy for some poor, lame little boy or girl. The little maid who had been taught by her father to look for the glad in everything, at first found it desperately hard to find anything glad or bright or good in those disappointing old crutches. But at last she beamingly made up her mind to be glad she need not use them!

But "Sunny Jim?" With father and mother both gone to the land of the leal, with face and legs and back misshapen, unable to sit up, to stand up, even to lie down at his will—how in the world can he ever be glad and continually inspire big folk, little folk and the whole corps of doctors and nurses to smile even when minded to weep? But there is one thing; yes, there are two things—the dear little heart of him that sings from morning till night and the true little mind that works with the heart.

If "Sunny Jim" at last is dismissed from the care of physicians and nurses, straight of back and firm of limb, or, at least, able to hold his own, he is likely to carry with him down to the end of his time one of the very best gifts bestowed upon mortals—the will to be glad and a smile straight from his heart to the hearts of all who behold it.

Unconsciously, the little lad has caught the spirit of the wonderful "glad game," and as unconsciously passed it along. And who doesn't wish him very well?

"Who painted that wonderful old picture?" asked the visitor. "Let me tell you a secret," replied Mr. Cumrox. "If I had spent my life learning to pronounce the names of all these great artists I'd never have made money enough to buy their pictures."—Washington Star.

"Mother, what does it mean when you read about escaping 'Scylla' only to get into worse trouble with 'Charybdis'?" asked Mrs. Baker's young hopeful. Mrs. Baker looked appealingly at her husband. "It's like this, Willie," explained his father, coming to his wife's rescue. "It means that just as soon as we get through paying ice bills we have to buy coal!"—Judge.

Disappointment.

"Public opinion, as it has shown itself in the past—it's growing a little kinder now—makes me think of the farm girl.

"A young farm girl asked to have Saturday off in order to go and see a man hanged. Permission was given her and she set out before daybreak, having 20 miles to walk.

"When she returned that evening she was in tears.

"'Why, Milly, what's the matter?' said her mistress.

"'Oh, dear!' sobbed the girl. "Oh, dear! The man's been reprieved.'"—New York Tribune.

A Vicarious Job.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana hails from a big country, and one of the few in which the Indian is still remaining on reservations. In his state are what are thought to be the fiercest of red skin tribes, the Cheyennes, while another famous agency is that of the Rosebud Indians. From a grazing state, over which once roamed immense herds of cattle, this country is rapidly becoming agricultural.

In such a prosperous community there is always plenty of work to be found, but the senator tells a story of a man out his way who did his work vicariously. Jim Jones was a ne'er-do-well; loafing his principal occupation and sponging on others his only industry. He never displayed any energy except at meals.

His brother did most of the supporting of the entire family, but at one time even that down trodden member happened not to have any position. Jim lounged about, grouching at his hard luck. Then one day he met the Senator and a smile as bright as a new engagement ring illuminated his rusty countenance.

"Why, Jim, you seem happy!" exclaimed the senator. "What's the glad news? Must have had some good luck come your way."

"I have!" cried Jim, throwing out his chest with pride. "My brother has just gotten a new job!"—Washington Star.

Some Experience.

A Chicago mining engineer tells in the Green Bag of a law suit tried in that city, wherein one of the witnesses was an old prospector from a mining settlement in the far northwest, a settlement situated about 12,000 feet above the sea, where the snow drifts and packs and remains the year round. "How long have you lived in Marshall?" asked the lawyer, conducting the examination of the old prospector. "The best part of one winter." "That's very indefinite," said the lawyer. "What do you mean by the best part of one winter?" "Well," said the witness, after due deliberation and reflection, "I've been up there about eleven months."

A Real Saver.

"America is the land of high wages, and it is really possible here for a workingman to grow rich. But England!"

"English farm laborers are striking for 16 shillings a week. They get 13 or 14 shillings. They want 16. But I doubt if they get it.

"And their pastors, living in beautiful manses on salaries of $4,000 or $5,000, call them improvident because in their old age they're usually destitute! The idea of expecting them to save money! It reminds me of old Bill Smith.

"'My son's got a fine job now,' said old Bill. 'He's savin' money fast.'

"'What is he doing?' said I.

"'He's a night printer, sir,' Bill answered.. 'Oh, a fine job. He works all night and saves his lodgin's; and then he sleeps all day and saves his food.'"—New York Herald.

THREE TOASTS.

Giant Strides in Fixing the Boundaries of Our Country.

At a dinner party given by Americans residing in Paris some years ago there were proposed sundry toasts concerning not so much the past and present as the expected glories of the great American nation. In the general character of these toasts geographical considerations were very prominent, and the principal fact which seemed to occupy the minds of the speakers was the unprecedented bigness of our country.

"Here's to the United States," said the first speaker, "bounded on the north by British America, on the south by the gulf of Mexico, on the east by the Atlantic and on the west by the Pacific ocean."

"But," said the second speaker, "this is far too limited a view of the subject. In assigning our boundaries we must look to the great and glorious future, which is prescribed for us by the manifest destiny of the Anglo-Saxon race. Here's to the United States, bounded on the north by the north pole, on the south by the south pole, on the east by the rising sun and on the west by the setting sun."

Here the third speaker arose, a very serious gentleman from the far west. "If we are going," said this truly patriotic American, "to leave the history past and present and take our manifest destiny into account, why restrict ourselves within the narrow limits assigned by our fellow countryman who has just sat down? I give you the United States, bounded on the north by the aurora borealis, on the south by the procession of the equinoxes, on the east by primeval chaos and on the west by the day of judgment."—Philadelphia Press.

WORKED HIS WEAK POINTS.

Mr. Ape Had No Memory, but Lots of Curiosity and Cowardice.

"Curiosity and cowardice," said the one legged veteran, "are the chief characteristics of all monkeys and of most men. I worked in a zoo after the war. I was the keeper of the monkey house. My biggest charge was an ape the size of a twelve-year-old boy, and it was through his curiosity and cowardice that I used to manage him.

"We exercised this ape in the big room every day, but when we wanted him to go back to his cage he'd climb up to the roof of the big room, and even with food you couldn't tempt him down.

"So I would go to Jack Lover and take him gently by the arm and direct his attention in a quiet, mysterious manner to the dark passage under the steam pipes.

"Lover and I every day tiptoed to the pipes. We pretended to point out to each other some horrible, unknown creature in the passage, and we'd say: 'Look out! There he is! There he is!'

"As we held each other's arms and bent over and peered into the darkness we'd hear very soon the delicate patter of small, active feet. The ape's curiosity had got the better of him. He crouched beside us. He, too, peered into the dark passage fearfully.

"Then suddenly Lover would shout: 'Look out! He's coming out! He's coming out!' And we'd scamper away in the direction of the ape's house. But the ape would be ahead of us. He'd rush into his house in a perfect whirlwind of excitement and terror. Then—click! We'd snap the door to on him, and he'd look very foolish.

"Every day we fooled the ape in this way. He was long, you see, on curiosity and cowardice, but very short on memory."—Chicago Herald.

How Hadley Proposed.

The way President Arthur Twining Hadley, according to a Yale legend, asked his prospective father-in-law for permission to marry his daughter was characteristic. At the time this gentleman, Luzon B. Morris, occupied an anomalous political position. He had recently been elected governor of Connecticut, but his claim was disputed, and the state was in a political turmoil.

"Mr. Morris," was the way Mr. Hadley approached the subject of his call, "I hope that I—at least—may be permitted to—to call you—governor."—World's Work.

Speed of the Street Song.

One of the curious things about the popular song is the rapidity of its dissemination among the street children. Few of them can hear it at first hand at the music halls, yet long before the latest catchy tune has found its way to the barrel organs or Sunday newspaper you will hear it rendered with amazing accuracy by tiny boys and girls. It seems to travel like rumor through an East Indian bazar.—London Standard.

His Kick.

"Why don't you go to the doctor with that cold?"

"Can't afford it."

"Yes, and that ends the transaction. The doctor keeps telling me to come again."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Her Coaxing Way.

She—Oh, sweet hubby, be so good as to make me a present of 100 marks. He—Well, if you need them you may have them. She—Oh, how nice! Now you need to give me only 300 marks more for my tailor's bill!—Fliegende Blatter.

CLEARWATER WILL WORK ON PLATFORM

Kingston Man Appointed Member of Sub Committee to Frame Republican Platform and Assigned to Write Law Reform and Judiciary Planks.

The committee of prominent Republicans appointed recently by Senator Elihu Root to discuss the proposed revision of the state constitution met at Republican state headquarters in New Yrk city on Friday morning at 11 o'clock.

The meeting was organized by the selection of Senator Root as chairman. The platform on which the Republican delegates at large to the constitutional convention shall run was the only subject talked about and the statement in New York newspapers that the candidacies of District Attorney Whitman, Mr. Hinman and Job Hedges were discussed is inaccurate.

There was no discussion of candidates, but there was a very full discussion of the importance of a presentation to the people of the state of the reasons why the Republican party should receive their support. The personnel of the committee and the full attendance of its members it was said was a sufficient guaranty that the important questions of the coming campaign would receive the most careful and serious consideration.

Besides Senator Root, there were present Henry L. Stimson, George W. Wickersham, Seth Low, William D. Guthrie, Philip J. McCook, Darwin R. James, Jr., William Barnes, Judge A. T. Clearwater, James S. Parker, Senator Elon R. Brown, William Nottingham, Jacob Gould Schurman, Senator Ralph W. Thomas, Charles A. Hawley, Adolph J. Rodenbeck, Adelbert Moot, John Lord O'Brien, Harold J. Hinman and Frederick C. Tanner. Ex-Senator J. Mayhew Wainright of Westchester, who was appointed a member of the committee, asked to be excused from serving on the ground that as a member of the Workmen's Compensation Commission he is prohibited from serving on any political committee.

After a complete interchange of views which took a couple of hours, on motion of Mr. Wickersham, Senator Root was authorized to appoint a subcommittee of nine to prepare a tentative platform which will be submitted to the full committee of thirty-one at Saratoga on the fifteenth of August.

Henry L. Stimson was made chairman of this subcommittee and the other members are ex-Mayor Seth Low, William D. Guthrie, ex-Congressmen Philip J. McCook and Darwin R. James, Jr., Judge A. T. Clearwater, President Jacob Gould Schurman of Cornell University, Ralph W. Thomas and John Lord O'Brian.

The subcommittee met immediately after luncheon and devoted the remainder of the day to a discussion of the various phases of the tentative platform, it being finally agreed to assign to each member the preparation of a plank to be embodied in the platform to be presented in August. To Judge Clearwater of this city was assigned the drawing of the plank relative to the judiciary and the reform of legal procedure.

To a Freeman reporter who asked the judge today as to whether there was any intimation of any preference by members of the committee as to candidacies, Judge Clearwater said there was none. He was asked whether anything was said as to Chairman William Barnes's libel suit against Colonel Roosevelt and he said it was not even alluded to; that the only subject discussed was as above stated—the attitude of the Republican party towards the coming constitutional convention.

It was generally agreed that the attitude of so many men immersed in large and important affairs and their willingness to serve upon the committee demonstrated that the Republicans of the state were united in the determination to frame and adopt a platform which would commend itself to all right minded, thinking men.

Asked about woman suffrage, Judge Clearwater said the committee heard the delegation of suffragettes with profound attention. They presented their views with force and directness and were seriously received by the members of the committee, upon whom they made a most excellent impression.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 25.—The European war scare had a depressive effect upon the stock market at the opening today and all prices were lower in the initial trading. There was an excited opening in United Steel Common which began ⅝ lower at 58⅞ and then scored a further fractional decline upon trading of 3,500 shares. Within a short time Steel rallied, however, and at the end of twenty minutes was selling at 59⅝. Among the other losses in the early trading were the following: Amalgamated Copper, 1½; American Can, ½; American Smelting, ½; American Tob., 1⅜; Atchison, ⅞; Baltimore & Ohio, ½; Canadian Pacific, ⅝; Chesapeake & Ohio, ½; St. Paul, ¾; Erie, ⅜; Gen. Electric, ¾; Great Petroleum, 1; Union Pacific, ¾; Southern Pacific, 1⅛; Reading, ¼; Penn. ⅛; Northern Pacific, 2; New York, New Haven & Hartford, ¼; New York Central began unchanged. By the end of 30 minutes a rallying tendency had developed and a number of important shares had made whole or partial recoveries. The curb was weak. Americans in London were under pressure.

The popular disposition is to place blame on other people and relieve ourselves of any and all criticism. Someone else is always at fault. Becky Edelson, a recognized "fury" among the I. W. W. horde, who is a counterpart of the "furies" of the English militant suffragettes, is serving a sentence on Blackwell's Island for misbehavior She was legally tried and convicted. She announces her intention of starving herself, or, to borrow a phrase from the English "furies," she will go on a "hunger strike." If she dies, the fault will be not her own, she says, but the fault of the officials. In national affairs the same situation is presented. President Wilson places the blame for failure of his policies on a few Democratic senators; they in turn blame the President. With accusing fingers each points at the other and solemnly assures the public that for all evils, the other is and will continue to be responsible. At Oyster Bay Colonel Roosevelt shouts that if the country had only adopted him and his views, happiness would rule, and he intimates that unless his ideas prevail, the nation and state will have a sorry future.

These are only three of numerous instances, and are cited because they are the most prominently before the public. According to the ideas of these people they cannot be wrong. They must have "issues" or else their cause, in their estimation, fails. "Issues" are not raised until someone has questioned their unqualified statements, and in order that someone will question them, they make their statements strong, and label them as "policies." As soon as doubt, or aspersion, or denial is cast upon their "policies," an "issue" is raised, and an appeal is made to the mass of the American people, who care nothing for their nonsense, to rally to the respective standards and fight. It matters not whether the battle ground is called Armageddon or something else, the principle employed is the same. There is no thought of toleration of other people's views, no thought of give and take, no thought of giving the other fellow a chance.

Egoism and egotism characterize the creeds and the creed-makers, and isms are paramount because their inventors say so. Men who take no interest in the isms are called reactionaries, and the man who becomes disgusted with the spectacle or who prefers to attend to his own business becomes the object of frenzied attack for what the agitators call lack of patriotism. With cranks of this kind it is often a serious thought whether in the event of the failure of their plans, the sun will rise on the morrow or whether the earth will not be shrouded in the darkness which they alone are able to dispel.

"I believe that the judgment and desire of the whole country cry out for a new temper in affairs," says President Wilson in his letter excusing Thomas D. Jones from further candidacy for membership in the Federal Reserve Board. "The time has come," he adds, "when discriminations against particular classes of men should be absolutely laid aside." This makes us think of Frankenstein in the novel who created from dissecting room materials a monster which got away from him and murdered his friend and strangled his bride. Wilson is in much the same predicament. He has had as much to do as anybody in encouraging those Bryan-Roosevelt policies which have fomented mischief and distrust and brought hard times upon the country under conditions which would otherwise insure phenomenal prosperity. Now he awakes to see what he has done. If he had never changed his mind about "knocking Bryan into cocked hat" and had surrounded himself with well-balanced advisers, he could have become the biggest man in recent history instead of degenerating into a sad joke.

It is too bad that the twenty-three Kingston merchants caught violating the law against selling goods on Sunday were let off with a warning instead of being thrown into jail. It is true that nobody's religious calm was disturbed, and nobody knew that the "Sabbath" was being violated until a Democratic spy came down from Albany and nosed around, but that makes no difference. Every law should be enforced with rigor to the end that we will become more careful about sending bigots and fools to the Legislature.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

Last November, at the North American Sanitarium in Atlantic City, the twisted little figure of a boy was carefully strapped to a frame, with his back bent into the shape of a bow to correct a spinal affection. When he first was taken to the sanitarium the doctors looked at his funny little face, distorted through a stroke of paralysis, and gravely, pityingly shook their heads, for, at best, they knew that the period of waiting would be discouragingly long.

As the nurse looked down upon the humped back, a bit of an ache stole into her heart and she placed a toy into the lad's arms, softly telling him he must "lie still until he got better." Much to her surprise, the little chap smiled back and radiantly assured her in a baby voice, half Polish, half English, "All light; I'll be good."

And from that day to this he has been the life of the place—"Sunny Jim," they call him.

Doctors draw close to the cot where he lies and they wonder why that wee back must carry such a burden, but "Sunny Jim" looks up into their faces with such a gay little smile and seems to get so much out of living that they go away smiling in spite of themselves, filled with admiration for the brave little fellow.

And so it goes the whole day long, for folk who come to pity are bound to leave with a smile when they view that cheerful young stoic singing and playing as if he was the gladdest little fellow alive.

All day his cot is drawn near to a window which looks over the sea, and he is as bright as the sun which lights up his room. He must stay just where, just how he is placed, but his busy hands can reach out for the toys on his cot, and his active mind devises the most wonderful games.

And, yes, he has a companion—a four-year-old mite whose tubercular leg is bound tight in a cast, and who lies flat on her back with weights hanging on her foot to stretch the little leg. Sometimes the hours drag a bit and then they tell each other stories; and, again, when they are too tired to talk, those two little creatures, cot-bound but not woe-bound, softly hum kindergarten songs and nursery rhymes to keep up the smiles.

"Sunny Jim" has learned a lot of funny tricks and the nurses are charmed with his joy, his bravery and all. And, think of it—nobody leaves his cot without falling under the magic of his dear, ready smile.

Unhappily, his parents are dead, but, happily, he has found foster-parents who love him devotedly, and who are watching every slow little symptom of improvement.

And "Sunny Jim," for the extraordinary "gladness" of him, might well have been another little "Pollyanna," that small maid of Eleanor H. Porter's fancy, instead of a flesh-and-blood boy, having, to the minds of most of folk, very little for which to be glad.

Those who dropped their more serious reading for a brief acquaintance with the small human sunbeam who made a "game" of being glad must almost think that "Sunny Jim" is "Pollyanna" come to life. For, without any intent to make a game of being glad, the brave lad, bound fast to his bed for long months at a time, does exactly what glad little "Pollyanna" accomplished—he sends everyone away from his cot by the window with a growing impulse to smile and be glad. Only, with him, it isn't a game. We recall that poor little "Pollyanna" away off in India with her missionary father, had wished and wished for a doll, and her father had sent her wish abroad. But when the box came from a far-off church at home the little eyes intently looking for the long-coveted and prayed-for doll found only a stiff little pair of crutches, which someone had sent because she hadn't a doll and she really thought that the crutches might come in handy for some poor, lame little boy or girl. The little maid who had been taught by her father to look for the glad in everything, at first found it desperately hard to find anything glad or bright or good in those disappointing old crutches. But at last she beamingly made up her mind to be glad she need not use them!

But "Sunny Jim?" With father and mother both gone to the land of the leal, with face and legs and back misshapen, unable to sit up, to stand up, even to lie down at his will—how in the world can he ever be glad and continually inspire big folk, little folk and the whole corps of doctors and nurses to smile even when minded to weep? But there is one thing; yes, there are two things—the dear little heart of him that sings from morning till night and the true little mind that works with the heart.

If "Sunny Jim" at last is dismissed from the care of physicians and nurses, straight of back and firm of limb, or, at least, able to hold his own, he is likely to carry with him down to the end of his time one of the very best gifts bestowed upon mortals—the will to be glad and a smile straight from his heart to the hearts of all who behold it.

Unconsciously, the little lad has caught the spirit of the wonderful "glad game," and as unconsciously passed it along. And who doesn't wish him very well?

"Who painted that wonderful old picture?" asked the visitor. "Let me tell you a secret," replied Mr. Cumrox. "If I had spent my life learning to pronounce the names of all these great artists I'd never have made money enough to buy their pictures."—Washington Star.

"Mother, what does it mean when you read about escaping 'Scylla' only to get into worse trouble with 'Charybdis'?" asked Mrs. Baker's young hopeful. Mrs. Baker looked appealingly at her husband. "It's like this, Willie," explained his father, coming to his wife's rescue. "It means that just as soon as we get through paying ice bills we have to buy coal!"—Judge.

Disappointment.

"Public opinion, as it has shown itself in the past—it's growing a little kinder now—makes me think of the farm girl.

"A young farm girl asked to have Saturday off in order to go and see a man hanged. Permission was given her and she set out before daybreak, having 20 miles to walk.

"When she returned that evening she was in tears.

"'Why, Milly, what's the matter?' said her mistress.

A Vicarious Job.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana hails from a big country, and one of the few in which the Indian is still remaining on reservations. In his state are what are thought to be the fiercest of red skin tribes, the Cheyennes, while another famous agency is that of the Rosebud Indians. From a grazing state, over which once roamed immense herds of cattle, this country is rapidly becoming agricultural.

In such a prosperous community there is always plenty of work to be found, but the senator tells a story of a man out his way who did his work vicariously. Jim Jones was a ne'er-do-well; loafing his principal occupation and sponging on others his only industry. He never displayed any energy except at meals.

His brother did most of the supporting of the entire family, but at one time even that down trodden member happened not to have any position. Jim lounged about, grouching at his hard luck. Then one day he met the Senator and a smile as bright as a new engagement ring illuminated his rusty countenance.

"Why, Jim, you seem happy!" exclaimed the senator. "What's the glad news? Must have had some good luck come your way."

"I have!" cried Jim, throwing out his chest with pride. "My brother has just gotten a new job!"—Washington Star.

Some Experience.

A Real Saver.

"America is the land of high wages, and it is really possible here for a workingman to grow rich. But England!"

"English farm laborers are striking for 16 shillings a week. They get 13 or 14 shillings. They want 16. But I doubt if they get it.

"And their pastors, living in beautiful manses on salaries of $4,000 or $5,000, call them improvident because in their old age they're usually destitute! The idea of expecting them to save money! It reminds me of old Bill Smith.

"'What is he doing?' said I.

"'He's a night printer, sir,' Bill answered.. 'Oh, a fine job. He works all night and saves his lodgin's; and then he sleeps all day and saves his food.'"—New York Herald.

THREE TOASTS.

Giant Strides in Fixing the Boundaries of Our Country.

At a dinner party given by Americans residing in Paris some years ago there were proposed sundry toasts concerning not so much the past and present as the expected glories of the great American nation. In the general character of these toasts geographical considerations were very prominent, and the principal fact which seemed to occupy the minds of the speakers was the unprecedented bigness of our country.

"Here's to the United States," said the first speaker, "bounded on the north by British America, on the south by the gulf of Mexico, on the east by the Atlantic and on the west by the Pacific ocean."

"But," said the second speaker, "this is far too limited a view of the subject. In assigning our boundaries we must look to the great and glorious future, which is prescribed for us by the manifest destiny of the Anglo-Saxon race. Here's to the United States, bounded on the north by the north pole, on the south by the south pole, on the east by the rising sun and on the west by the setting sun."

Here the third speaker arose, a very serious gentleman from the far west. "If we are going," said this truly patriotic American, "to leave the history past and present and take our manifest destiny into account, why restrict ourselves within the narrow limits assigned by our fellow countryman who has just sat down? I give you the United States, bounded on the north by the aurora borealis, on the south by the procession of the equinoxes, on the east by primeval chaos and on the west by the day of judgment."—Philadelphia Press.

WORKED HIS WEAK POINTS.

Mr. Ape Had No Memory, but Lots of Curiosity and Cowardice.

"Curiosity and cowardice," said the one legged veteran, "are the chief characteristics of all monkeys and of most men. I worked in a zoo after the war. I was the keeper of the monkey house. My biggest charge was an ape the size of a twelve-year-old boy, and it was through his curiosity and cowardice that I used to manage him.

"We exercised this ape in the big room every day, but when we wanted him to go back to his cage he'd climb up to the roof of the big room, and even with food you couldn't tempt him down.

"So I would go to Jack Lover and take him gently by the arm and direct his attention in a quiet, mysterious manner to the dark passage under the steam pipes.

"Lover and I every day tiptoed to the pipes. We pretended to point out to each other some horrible, unknown creature in the passage, and we'd say: 'Look out! There he is! There he is!'

"As we held each other's arms and bent over and peered into the darkness we'd hear very soon the delicate patter of small, active feet. The ape's curiosity had got the better of him. He crouched beside us. He, too, peered into the dark passage fearfully.

"Then suddenly Lover would shout: 'Look out! He's coming out! He's coming out!' And we'd scamper away in the direction of the ape's house. But the ape would be ahead of us. He'd rush into his house in a perfect whirlwind of excitement and terror. Then—click! We'd snap the door to on him, and he'd look very foolish.

"Every day we fooled the ape in this way. He was long, you see, on curiosity and cowardice, but very short on memory."—Chicago Herald.

How Hadley Proposed.

The way President Arthur Twining Hadley, according to a Yale legend, asked his prospective father-in-law for permission to marry his daughter was characteristic. At the time this gentleman, Luzon B. Morris, occupied an anomalous political position. He had recently been elected governor of Connecticut, but his claim was disputed, and the state was in a political turmoil.

"Mr. Morris," was the way Mr. Hadley approached the subject of his call, "I hope that I—at least—may be permitted to—to call you—governor."—World's Work.

Speed of the Street Song.

One of the curious things about the popular song is the rapidity of its dissemination among the street children. Few of them can hear it at first hand at the music halls, yet long before the latest catchy tune has found its way to the barrel organs or Sunday newspaper you will hear it rendered with amazing accuracy by tiny boys and girls. It seems to travel like rumor through an East Indian bazar.—London Standard.

His Kick.

"Why don't you go to the doctor with that cold?"

"Can't afford it."

"Yes, and that ends the transaction. The doctor keeps telling me to come again."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Her Coaxing Way.

She—Oh, sweet hubby, be so good as to make me a present of 100 marks. He—Well, if you need them you may have them. She—Oh, how nice! Now you need to give me only 300 marks more for my tailor's bill.—Fliegende Blatter.

CLEARWATER WILL WORK ON PLATFORM

The committee of prominent Republicans appointed recently by Senator Elihu Root to discuss the proposed revision of the state constitution met at Republican state headquarters in New Yrk city on Friday morning at 11 o'clock.

The meeting was organized by the selection of Senator Root as chairman. The platform on which the Republican delegates at large to the constitutional convention shall run was the only subject talked about and the statement in New York newspapers that the candidacies of District Attorney Whitman, Mr. Hinman and Job Hedges were discussed is inaccurate.

There was no discussion of candidates, but there was a very full discussion of the importance of a presentation to the people of the state of the reasons why the Republican party should receive their support. The personnel of the committee and the full attendance of its members it was said was a sufficient guaranty that the important questions of the coming campaign would receive the most careful and serious consideration.

Besides Senator Root, there were present Henry L. Stimson, George W. Wickersham, Seth Low, William D. Guthrie, Philip J. McCook, Darwin R. James, Jr., William Barnes, Judge A. T. Clearwater, James S. Parker, Senator Elon R. Brown, William Nottingham, Jacob Gould Schurman, Senator Ralph W. Thomas, Charles A. Hawley, Adolph J. Rodenbeck, Adelbert Moot, John Lord O'Brien, Harold J. Hinman and Frederick C. Tanner. Ex-Senator J. Mayhew Wainright of Westchester, who was appointed a member of the committee, asked to be excused from serving on the ground that as a member of the Workmen's Compensation Commission he is prohibited from serving on any political committee.

After a complete interchange of views which took a couple of hours, on motion of Mr. Wickersham, Senator Root was authorized to appoint a subcommittee of nine to prepare a tentative platform which will be submitted to the full committee of thirty-one at Saratoga on the fifteenth of August.

Henry L. Stimson was made chairman of this subcommittee and the other members are ex-Mayor Seth Low, William D. Guthrie, ex-Congressmen Philip J. McCook and Darwin R. James, Jr., Judge A. T. Clearwater, President Jacob Gould Schurman of Cornell University, Ralph W. Thomas and John Lord O'Brian.

The subcommittee met immediately after luncheon and devoted the remainder of the day to a discussion of the various phases of the tentative platform, it being finally agreed to assign to each member the preparation of a plank to be embodied in the platform to be presented in August. To Judge Clearwater of this city was assigned the drawing of the plank relative to the judiciary and the reform of legal procedure.

To a Freeman reporter who asked the judge today as to whether there was any intimation of any preference by members of the committee as to candidacies, Judge Clearwater said there was none. He was asked whether anything was said as to Chairman William Barnes's libel suit against Colonel Roosevelt and he said it was not even alluded to; that the only subject discussed was as above stated—the attitude of the Republican party towards the coming constitutional convention.

It was generally agreed that the attitude of so many men immersed in large and important affairs and their willingness to serve upon the committee demonstrated that the Republicans of the state were united in the determination to frame and adopt a platform which would commend itself to all right minded, thinking men.

Asked about woman suffrage, Judge Clearwater said the committee heard the delegation of suffragettes with profound attention. They presented their views with force and directness and were seriously received by the members of the committee, upon whom they made a most excellent impression.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, July 25.—The European war scare had a depressive effect upon the stock market at the opening today and all prices were lower in the initial trading. There was an excited opening in United Steel Common which began ⅝ lower at 58⅞ and then scored a further fractional decline upon trading of 3,500 shares. Within a short time Steel rallied, however, and at the end of twenty minutes was selling at 59⅝. Among the other losses in the early trading were the following: Amalgamated Copper, 1½; American Can, ⅛; American Smelting, ½; American Tob., 1⅜; Atchison, ⅞; Baltimore & Ohio, ½; Canadian Pacific, ⅝; Chesapeake & Ohio, ½; St. Paul, ⅞; Erie, ⅝; Gen. Electric, ⅝; Great Petroleum, 1; Union Pacific, ⅝; Southern Pacific, 1⅛; Reading, ¼; Penn. ⅛; Northern Pacific, 2; New York, New Haven & Hartford, ¼; New York Central began unchanged. By the end of 30 minutes a rallying tendency had developed and a number of important shares had made whole or partial recoveries. The curb was weak. Americans in London were under pressure.

HARRY THAW IS NOW A TEETOTALER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Gorham, N. H., July 25.—This summer resort town, set in the midst of the beautiful White Mountains about ten miles from the highest peak, Washington, is proving a blissful temporary refuge to Harry Kendall Thaw, slayer of Stanford White.

Automobiling, whipping the many good trout streams, conversing courteously with all who seek his acquaintance, and doing a large amount of work in offices he has established in the Noyes building, Thaw is having the happiest summer in many a year of his troubled career.

It is a quiet sort of life. The surroundings are peaceful and idyllic.

Thaw has come and gone about the village so much that the inhabitants are no longer roused to great curiosity by his rather slovenly figure.

His habits are excellent. Dr. Austin Flint and William Travers Jerome, Thaw's "Nemesis," it will be remembered, have often contended that with a single drink of champagne, Thaw might become a raving maniac and kill someone.

Well, however that may be, Thaw doesn't give the single draft of fizz water a chance to show what it can do. He's a teetotaler. He never frequents the bars of the village hotels and no liquor is seen to enter his room. He smokes cigars and that is all. He's distinctly on his good behavior and others stopping at the Mount Madison House, where he has a suite of four rooms find it difficult to realize that the spectacled middle-aged man with the bulging eyes and the hair shot with grey is the celebrated Matteawan captive.

In his suite with Thaw live Deputy Sheriff C. D. Stevens, his guard, and H J. Rice, his secretary. Stevens is assistant to Sheriff Holman Drew, who lives in the nearby town of Berlin and who takes turns with Stevens in guarding the prisoner.

There are those who believe Thaw would find it easy to escape. Thaw has just purchased a five passenger touring car. The Canadian border is not far.

But Thaw has shown no inclination to take French leave. This was indicated conclusively by the incident of the fishing trip when he became lost. He and Stevens struck in at different points on Nineteen Mile Brook and missed each other. At half past eight o'clock in the evening the deputy sheriff called up the hotel, there was some excitement and a search party was organized. Secretary Rice was the leader.

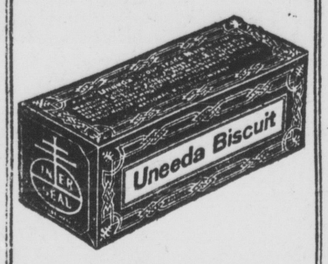

With the aid of lanterns Thaw was found about 2 o'clock in the morning. He was seated philosophically on a rock in the middle of the stream, perfectly calm, though a trifle wet and hungry. With great good sense, when he realized that he was lost, he had concluded the thing to do was to wait for someone to come to him.

He could have covered a good many miles toward liberty in the hours between 10 in the morning and the time he was located, if he had pleased to do so.

Apparently he is convinced that the courts soon will set him free and there is nothing to do except wait and watch.

GOOD ROADS CROP PRODUCERS.

Government Studies Show How the Agricultural Output of a County Depends Upon its Highroads.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, D. C., July 25.—That an improved road will increase vastly the productiveness of the area through which it runs has now been satisfactorily demonstrated by studies conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture in Virginia. Conditions in Spotsylvania county were investigated with particular care and the results have proved surprising. In 1909 the county voted $100,000 to improve 40 miles of roads. Two years after the completion of this work the railroad took away in 12 months from Fredericksburg, the county seat, 71,000 tons of agricultural and forest products hauled over the highways to that town. Before the improvement of the roads this total was only 49,000 tons annually; in other words the quantity of the county's produce had risen more than 45 per cent. Still more interesting, however, is the increase shown in the quantity of the dairy products. In 1909 these amounted to 114,815 pounds, in 1911 to 273,028 pounds, an increase of practically 140 per cent in two years. In the same time shipments of wheat had increased 59 per cent, tobacco 31 per cent, and lumber and other forest products 48 per cent.

In addition to this increase in quantity the cost of hauling each ton of produce was materially reduced. In other words the farmers not only produce more but produce more cheaply, for the cost of transportation to market is of course an important factor in the cost of production. From this point of view it is estimated that the $100,000 spent in improving the roads in Spotsylvania county saved the farmers of that county $41,000 a year.

In the past two years the traffic studies of the federal experts show that approximately an average of 65,000 tons of outgoing products were hauled over the improved roads in the county an average distance of 8 miles, or a total of 520,000 "ton-miles." Before the roads were improved it was estimated that the average cost of hauling was 20 cents a "ton-mile," after the improvement this fell to 12 cents a "ton-mile", or a saving of 8 cents. A saving of 8 cents per mile on 520,000 "ton-miles" is $41,000 a year. The county's investment of $100,000 in other words returns a dividend of 40 per cent annually.

Because this saving, in cases of this character, does not take the form of cash put directly into the farmers' pocket there is a widespread tendency to believe that it is fictitious profit, while as a matter of fact it is just as real a source of profit as the increase in the price of wheat.

In Dinwiddie county, Virginia, for example, where peanuts is one of the staple crops, the average load for two mules on a main road was 1,000 pounds before the road was improved. After its improvement the average load was found to be 2,000 pounds and the time consumed in hauling the larger load to market was much reduced. In other words one man with a wagon and two mules could do more than twice as much work with the improved road than with an unimproved road. This is the explanation of the extraordinary rise in the total output of agricultural products in a county with a good road system.

Attempted Suicide.

His throat slashed from ear to ear and almost dead from exposure, Charles Vervalen, forty-five years old, employed as a baker for A. C. McCurdy at Rhinebeck, was discovered lying near a tree in the yard of his boarding house on Friday morning with a razor at his side after an attempt to end his life while the other members of the household were asleep. He is now under the care of Health Officer Lown of that village, and but little hopes for his recovery are held. Vervalen had some time previous made an attempt to end his life by throwing himself in front of an approaching train but bystanders had pulled him off the track in time. He had been an inmate of the Hudson River State Hospital, but had been discharged from that institution in 1905.

A Public Nuisance.

The neighbors around Franklin and Liberty streets are very much annoyed by a gang of boys aged from 14 to 16 years who congregate around No. 8 school yard nights, during the evening and after 10 o'clock, singing and making night hideous by their noise. If these concerts are not stopped at once the matter will be taken up with the police and arrests will follow for creating a further nuisance.

Big Excursion at the Point.

A large excursion from Utica and other points along the New York Central came to Kingston Point today, arriving on the Hendrick Hudson. They returned on the Washington Irving.

A Daily Bath for the Eye.

A daily "eye bath" is an excellent means of preserving the sight and beauty of the eyes, and is particularly valuable for persons who motor a good deal, for nothing is more injurious to eyes than frequent contact with dust. Dissolve one teaspoonful of boracic acid powder in one pint of rosewater. Every night pour some of the lotion into a glass eyebath, add enough hot water to render it tepid, and bathe each eye in turn by opening and shutting it in the lotion.

HARRY THAW IS NOW A TEETOTALER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Gorham, N. H., July 25.—This summer resort town, set in the midst of the beautiful White Mountains about ten miles from the highest peak, Washington, is proving a blissful temporary refuge to Harry Kendall Thaw, slayer of Stanford White.

Automobiling, whipping the many good trout streams, conversing courteously with all who seek his acquaintance, and doing a large amount of work in offices he has established in the Noyes building, Thaw is having the happiest summer in many a year of his troubled career.

It is a quiet sort of life. The surroundings are peaceful and idyllic.

Thaw has come and gone about the village so much that the inhabitants are no longer roused to great curiosity by his rather slovenly figure.

His habits are excellent. Dr. Austin Flint and William Travers Jerome, Thaw's "Nemesis," it will be remembered, have often contended that with a single drink of champagne, Thaw might become a raving maniac and kill someone.

Well, however that may be, Thaw doesn't give the single draft of fizz water a chance to show what it can do. He's a teetotaler. He never frequents the bars of the village hotels and no liquor is seen to enter his room. He smokes cigars and that is all. He's distinctly on his good behavior and others stopping at the Mount Madison House, where he has a suite of four rooms find it difficult to realize that the spectacled middle-aged man with the bulging eyes and the hair shot with grey is the celebrated Matteawan captive.

In his suite with Thaw live Deputy Sheriff C. D. Stevens, his guard, and H J. Rice, his secretary. Stevens is assistant to Sheriff Holman Drew, who lives in the nearby town of Berlin and who takes turns with Stevens in guarding the prisoner.

There are those who believe Thaw would find it easy to escape. Thaw has just purchased a five passenger touring car. The Canadian border is not far.

But Thaw has shown no inclination to take French leave. This was indicated conclusively by the incident of the fishing trip when he became lost. He and Stevens struck in at different points on Nineteen Mile Brook and missed each other. At half past eight o'clock in the evening the deputy sheriff called up the hotel, there was some excitement and a search party was organized. Secretary Rice was the leader.

With the aid of lanterns Thaw was found about 2 o'clock in the morning. He was seated philosophically on a rock in the middle of the stream, perfectly calm, though a trifle wet and hungry. With great good sense, when he realized that he was lost, he had concluded the thing to do was to wait for someone to come to him.

He could have covered a good many miles toward liberty in the hours between 10 in the morning and the time he was located, if he had pleased to do so.

Apparently he is convinced that the courts soon will set him free and there is nothing to do except wait and watch.

GOOD ROADS CROP PRODUCERS.

Government Studies Show How the Agricultural Output of a County Depends Upon its Highroads.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, D. C., July 25.—That an improved road will increase vastly the productiveness of the area through which it runs has now been satisfactorily demonstrated by studies conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture in Virginia. Conditions in Spotsylvania county were investigated with particular care and the results have proved surprising. In 1909 the county voted $100,000 to improve 40 miles of roads. Two years after the completion of this work the railroad took away in 12 months from Fredericksburg, the county seat, 71,000 tons of agricultural and forest products hauled over the highways to that town. Before the improvement of the roads this total was only 49,000 tons annually; in other words the quantity of the county's produce had risen more than 45 per cent. Still more interesting, however, is the increase shown in the quantity of the dairy products. In 1909 these amounted to 114,815 pounds, in 1911 to 273,028 pounds, an increase of practically 140 per cent in two years. In the same time shipments of wheat had increased 59 per cent, tobacco 31 per cent, and lumber and other forest products 48 per cent.

In addition to this increase in quantity the cost of hauling each ton of produce was materially reduced. In other words the farmers not only produce more but produce more cheaply, for the cost of transportation to market is of course an important factor in the cost of production. From this point of view it is estimated that the $100,000 spent in improving the roads in Spotsylvania county saved the farmers of that county $41,000 a year.

In the past two years the traffic studies of the federal experts show that approximately an average of 65,000 tons of outgoing products were hauled over the improved roads in the county an average distance of 8 miles, or a total of 520,000 "ton-miles." Before the roads were improved it was estimated that the average cost of hauling was 20 cents a "ton-mile," after the improvement this fell to 12 cents a "ton-mile", or a saving of 8 cents. A saving of 8 cents per mile on 520,000 "ton-miles" is $41,000 a year. The county's investment of $100,000 in other words returns a dividend of 40 per cent annually.

Because this saving, in cases of this character, does not take the form of cash put directly into the farmers' pocket there is a widespread tendency to believe that it is fictitious profit, while as a matter of fact it is just as real a source of profit as the increase in the price of wheat.

In Dinwiddie county, Virginia, for example, where peanuts is one of the staple crops, the average load for two mules on a main road was 1,000 pounds before the road was improved. After its improvement the average load was found to be 2,000 pounds and the time consumed in hauling the larger load to market was much reduced. In other words one man with a wagon and two mules could do more than twice as much work with the improved road than with an unimproved road. This is the explanation of the extraordinary rise in the total output of agricultural products in a county with a good road system.

Attempted Suicide.

His throat slashed from ear to ear and almost dead from exposure, Charles Vervalen, forty-five years old, employed as a baker for A. C. McCurdy at Rhinebeck, was discovered lying near a tree in the yard of his boarding house on Friday morning with a razor at his side after an attempt to end his life while the other members of the household were asleep. He is now under the care of Health Officer Lown of that village, and but little hopes for his recovery are held. Vervalen had some time previous made an attempt to end his life by throwing himself in front of an approaching train but bystanders had pulled him off the track in time. He had been an inmate of the Hudson River State Hospital, but had been discharged from that institution in 1905.

A Public Nuisance.

The neighbors around Franklin and Liberty streets are very much annoyed by a gang of boys aged from 14 to 16 years who congregate around No. 8 school yard nights, during the evening and after 10 o'clock, singing and making night hideous by their noise. If these concerts are not stopped at once the matter will be taken up with the police and arrests will follow for creating a further nuisance.

Big Excursion at the Point.

A large excursion from Utica and other points along the New York Central came to Kingston Point today, arriving on the Hendrick Hudson. They returned on the Washington Irving.

A Daily Bath for the Eye.

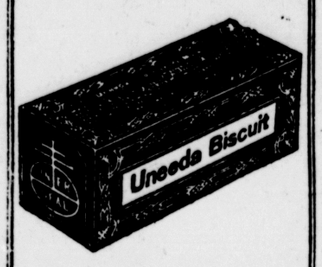

A daily "eye bath" is an excellent means of preserving the sight and beauty of the eyes, and is particularly valuable for persons who motor a good deal, for nothing is more injurious to eyes than frequent contact with dust. Dissolve one teaspoonful of boracic acid powder in one pint of rosewater. Every night pour some of the lotion into a glass eyebath, add enough hot water to render it tepid, and bathe each eye in turn by opening and shutting it in the lotion.

The 1915 Model at the New Profit-Sharing Price

THE Chandler still leads—not on promises but on performances. The new 1915 price is an instance of its leadership. Such a price—$1595—seems impossible but it's true, and the car is an even better car than the 1914 Chandler, which brought the most excellent service to purchasers all over America.

There are no radical changes in the 1915 model. There couldn't be, for the Chandler last year was distinguished by high-class features—such as Bosch magneto, imported annular ball bearings, genuine imported silent chains for driving motor shafts, separate unit electric starting and lighting system, cast aluminum motor base, etc., etc.—but all through the 1915 model are refinements and improvements.

The pure stream-line body, sweeping in unbroken lines from the bow of the tonneau to the deep Mayo radiator, makes the Chandler the last word in motor car beauty.

The 1915 price marks the willingness of the Chandler manufacturers to divide their prosperity with their purchasers.

Come see the Chandler. Come ride in it. Come drive it, if you drive. Come get acquainted with the marvelous Chandler motor. We are glad to let this car speak for itself.

Weighs 2885 lbs. Runs 16 miles per gallon of gasoline. Averages 700 miles per gallon of oil and 7000 miles per set of tires.

Daily Freeman

SERVIA YIELDS REPORT SAYS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Vienna, July 25.—A press dispatch from Belgrade this afternoon says that the Servian cabinet decided to acquiesce to the demands of Austria's ultimatum under protest.

Berlin, July 25.—Although the Austro-Servian situation is acutely ominous with clouds of war looming above the horizon of Southern Europe, the opinion prevailed in high official circles today that there would be a peaceful adjustment.

Europe is feverishly agitated because of the far reaching consequences of an open break between Austria and Servia, but there were evidences that England is preparing to step into the breach as the pacificator.

Even if war is averted as the Conservative statesmen of every European power hopes it will be, it is inevitable that a long period of international unrest will ensue.

The suddenness with which the crisis developed has all but overwhelmed the chancelleries of Europe and it has been years since there was such a lively exchange of diplomatic telegrams between the capitals as took place during the past 24 hours.

One of the gravest developments was the action of the Austrian foreign office in notifying Baron Von Gisel de Gieslingen, the Austrian minister to Servia, to leave Belgrade with the entire legation staff if Servia should fail to deliver a favorable answer before six o'clock this evening to the ultimatum delivered by Emperor Francis Joseph.

An actual recall of the Austrian minister to Servia would mean a complete break in the diplomatic relations between the two countries. Such a step is a usual preliminary to an open declaration of war.

The gravity of the questions under deliberation by the Russian ministry is shown by the fact that Czar Nicholas announced his intention of presiding personally at the meeting.

Servia is looking to Russia as her friend for advice in this crisis. Russia is the only great power from which Servia could anticipate help in the event of hostilities. Therefore Russia stood out today as the keystone of the whole situation.

Powerful influences were at work in St. Petersburg in favor of peace. But at the same time it cannot be denied that there are agencies working for war.

Compelling diplomatic pressure has been brought upon the Austrian government to extend the time limit of the Servian ultimatum, but the indications were that the Viennese government would refuse to yield.

Count Von Berchthold, the Austrian foreign minister, went to Ischl to await the reply from Belgrade. Emperor Francis Joseph is at Ischl and Servia's reply will be presented to him through the foreign minister.

In sentiment at least the continental powers have taken sides. Germany will undoubtedly lend her moral suport to Austria in compliance with the obligations entailed by the triple alliance. Italy has already given open evidences of her intention to support Austria.

On the other hand Russia's friendship for Servia is open and acknowledged and while France is not bound so closely to Russia as Germany and Italy are bound to Austria nevertheless, there are secret ties which are very strong.

It is believed that Emperor William will hasten back to Berlin. He has been cruising off Norway keeping in touch with state affairs by means of the wireless.

The Austro-Hungarian reservists in Berlin have been notified to hold themselves in readiness for a mobilization offer.

AUSTRIA DEMANDS TO BE LET ALONE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Vienna, July 25.—"Hands off" is the attitude adopted by the Austrian government in the Austro-Servian crisis. Austria wants the powers to remain aloof so that she can settle her own territorial and racial questions with the little kingdom south of the Danube.

Although there was some display of martial spirit today, for the most part the residents of the capital were apathetic.

The government is in receipt of representations for an extension of time for Servia to reply to the Austrian ultimatum.

Just what action will be taken by Austria in the event of an evasive reply from Belgrade is problematical.

Cipher dispatches from Belgrade indicated that the Servian government would reply to the ultimatum without finding a definite decision on the main demands in the Austrian note. The reply, however, would leave the way open for a second answer which would be more specific in character.

As a result of the pacific representations made to Austria by the powers, it is likely that the door will be opened by which a peaceful, diplomatic settlement can be brought about between the two nations in dispute.

LAWS OF NEW YORK—By Authority.

CHAP. 418.

Became a law April 17, 1914, with the approval of the Governor. Passed, three-fifths being present.

Section 1. That the standard grades or classes for apples grown in this state when packed in closed packages shall be as follows:

First. New York standard fancy grade shall consist of apples of one variety, which are well-grown specimens, hand-picked, properly packed, of good color for the variety, normal shape, free from dirt, diseases, insect and fungus injury, bruise and other defects except such as are necessarily caused in the operation of packing.

Second. New York standard "A" grade shall consist of apples of one variety which are well-grown specimens, hand-picked, properly packed, of good color for the variety, normal shape, practically free from dirt, diseases, insect and fungus injury, bruises and other defects except such as are necessarily caused in the operation of packing; or apples of one variety which are not more than ten per centum below the foregoing specifications on a combination of all defects or five per centum on any single defect.

Third. New York standard "B" grade shall consist of apples of one variety which are well matured, hand-picked, properly packed, practically normal shape, practically free from dirt, diseases, insect and fungus injury, and which may be of medium or less than medium color for the variety; or apples of one variety which are not more than ten per centum below the foregoing specifications on a combination of all defects or five per centum on any single defect.

Fourth. Unclassified. Apples not conforming to the foregoing specifications of grade, or, if conforming, are not branded in accordance therewith, shall be classed as unclassified and so branded. The minimum size of the fruit in the package shall also be branded upon it as hereinafter specified and in addition to the other marks hereinafter required.

The marks indicating grade as above prescribed may be accompanied by any other designation of grade or brand if that designation or brand is not inconsistent with or marked more conspicuously than the one of the said four marks which is used on the said package. Apples packed and branded in accordance with the United States law approved August third, nineteen hundred and twelve, shall be exempt from the provisions of this act.

The minimum size of the fruit in all classes or grades, including the unclassified, shall be determined by taking the transverse diameter of the smallest fruit in the package at right angles to the stem and blossom end. Minimum sizes shall be stated in variations of one-quarter of an inch, like two inches, two and one-quarter inches, two and one-half inches, two and three-quarter inches, three inches, three and one-quarter inches, and so on, in accordance with the facts.

Minimum sizes may be designated by figures instead of words. The word "minimum" may be designated by using the abbreviation "min."

A tolerance or variation of five per centum on size shall be allowed in all classes, but such five per centum shall not be in addition to the variations or tolerances for defects provided in grades "A" and "B."

§ 2. Every closed package containing apples grown in the state of New York which is packed, sold, distributed, transported or offered or exposed for sale, distribution or transportation in the state by any person shall bear upon the outside of one end in plain letters and figures the name and address of the packer or the person by whose authority the apples were packed and the package marked, the true name of the variety, the grade or class of the apples therein contained and the minimum size of the fruit in the package, as provided by section one. If the true name of the variety shall not be known to the packer or the person by whose authority the package is packed or branded, then such variety shall be designated as "unknown." Every package of apples which is repacked shall bear the name and address of the repacker or the name of the person by whose authority it is repacked in place of that of the original packer.

§ 3. It shall be unlawful for any person within this state, except under the percentages of tolerance and variation as allowed by paragraphs second and third of section one relating to New York standard "A" and "B" grades, to pack, sell, distribute, transport, offer or expose for sale in closed packages apples which are not hand-picked or which are wormy or diseased, or which show fungus or scab injury, unless such fact or facts shall be plainly stated by the use of the words "not hand-picked," "wormy," "diseased," "fungused," or "scabby," as the case may be, said words to be branded upon the outside of the same end of the package on which the marks prescribed by section two shall appear.

§ 4. The marks or brands prescribed by sections one, two and three shall be in block letters and figures of size not less than thirty-six point gothic.

§ 5. It shall be unlawful for any person within the state to pack, sell, distribute, transport, offer or expose for sale, distribution or transportation, apples which are adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act.

§ 6. For the purposes of this act apples packed in a closed package shall be deemed to be misbranded:

First. If the package shall fail to bear all statements required by sections one, two and three.

Second. If the package shall be falsely branded or shall bear any statement, design or device regarding such apples which is false or misleading, or if the package bears any statement, design or device indicating that the apples contained therein are New York "standard grade" and said apples when packed or repacked do not conform to the requirements prescribed by section one of this act.

§ 7. For the purposes of this act apples packed in closed packages shall be deemed to be adulterated if their quality or grade when packed or repacked does not conform to the marks upon the package.

§ 8. Any person who knowingly misbrands or adulterates apples within the meaning of this act, or who knowingly violates any of the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be punished for the first offense by a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars and not less than ten dollars; for the second offense by a fine not exceeding fifty dollars and not less than twenty-five dollars, and for the third and each subsequent offense by a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars and not less than fifty dollars, together, in all cases, with the costs of prosecution.

Whenever any such violation is with respect to a lot or shipment consisting of fifty or more closed packages, there may be imposed in addition to the above penalties twenty-five cents for the first offense, fifty cents for the second offense and one dollar for each subsequent offense for each package in excess of fifty with respect to which such violation is committed.

§ 9. The enforcement of this act shall be vested in the commissioner of agriculture under rules and regulations to be adopted by him.

§ 10. No person shall be prosecuted under the provisions of this act when he can establish a guaranty signed by the person from whom he received such articles to the effect that the same is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act. Said guaranty to be valid shall contain the true name and address of the person or persons making the sale, and in such case the guarantor shall be liable to the penalties of this act.

§ 11. Definitions. The word "person" as used herein shall be construed to include both the singular and plural, individuals, corporations, copartnerships, companies, societies and associations. The act, omission or failure of any officer, agent, servant or employee acting within the scope of his employment or office shall be deemed the act, omission or failure of the principal. The words "closed package" shall mean a box, barrel or other package, the contents of which cannot be seen or inspected when such package is closed. The words "not hand-picked" shall include windfalls, drops and apples shaken or knocked from the tree by any agency.

§ 12. No person shall on behalf of any other person pack any fruit for sale, transportation, or distribution contrary to the provisions of this act.

§ 13. This act shall not apply to unpacked apples actually transported in barrels to storage within this state until the same are removed from storage for the purpose of marketing, sale, transportation or distribution.

I have compared the preceding with the original law on file in this office, and do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript therefrom and of the whole of said original law.

MITCHELL MAY,
Secretary of State.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Vienna, July 25.—A press dispatch from Belgrade this afternoon says that the Servian cabinet decided to acquiesce to the demands of Austria's ultimatum under protest.

Berlin, July 25.—Although the Austro-Servian situation is acutely ominous with clouds of war looming above the horizon of Southern Europe, the opinion prevailed in high official circles today that there would be a peaceful adjustment.

Europe is feverishly agitated because of the far reaching consequences of an open break between Austria and Servia, but there were evidences that England is preparing to step into the breach as the pacificator.

Even if war is averted as the Conservative statesmen of every European power hopes it will be, it is inevitable that a long period of international unrest will ensue.

The suddenness with which the crisis developed has all but overwhelmed the chancelleries of Europe and it has been years since there was such a lively exchange of diplomatic telegrams between the capitals as took place during the past 24 hours.

One of the gravest developments was the action of the Austrian foreign office in notifying Baron Von Gisel de Gieslingen, the Austrian minister to Servia, to leave Belgrade with the entire legation staff if Servia should fail to deliver a favorable answer before six o'clock this evening to the ultimatum delivered by Emperor Francis Joseph.

An actual recall of the Austrian minister to Servia would mean a complete break in the diplomatic relations between the two countries. Such a step is a usual preliminary to an open declaration of war.

The gravity of the questions under deliberation by the Russian ministry is shown by the fact that Czar Nicholas announced his intention of presiding personally at the meeting.

Servia is looking to Russia as her friend for advice in this crisis. Russia is the only great power from which Servia could anticipate help in the event of hostilities. Therefore Russia stood out today as the keystone of the whole situation.

Powerful influences were at work in St. Petersburg in favor of peace. But at the same time it cannot be denied that there are agencies working for war.

Compelling diplomatic pressure has been brought upon the Austrian government to extend the time limit of the Servian ultimatum, but the indications were that the Viennese government would refuse to yield.

Count Von Berchthold, the Austrian foreign minister, went to Ischl to await the reply from Belgrade. Emperor Francis Joseph is at Ischl and Servia's reply will be presented to him through the foreign minister.

In sentiment at least the continental powers have taken sides. Germany will undoubtedly lend her moral suport to Austria in compliance with the obligations entailed by the triple alliance. Italy has already given open evidences of her intention to support Austria.

On the other hand Russia's friendship for Servia is open and acknowledged and while France is not bound so closely to Russia as Germany and Italy are bound to Austria nevertheless, there are secret ties which are very strong.

It is believed that Emperor William will hasten back to Berlin. He has been cruising off Norway keeping in touch with state affairs by means of the wireless.

Walbert Will Filed.

The will of Barbara Walbert of this city was filed for probate with Surrogate Gill in the surrogate's court this morning and a citation for its probate was issued. To her son, Joseph Fox, the testatrix devises her house and lot on Furnace street. To her son, Henry Fox, and to her daughter, Carrie Elizabeth Gehm, she bequeaths the sum of $300 each. Personal property is also given to the three children. The testatrix directs that money received from the Prudential Insurance Company shall first be applied on the payment of funeral expenses and legacies, and the balance if necessary shall be drawn from moneys on deposit in the Rondout Savings Bank, the balance of which moneys she bequeaths to her grandchildren, Louisa Fox and Frank Fox. The son, Joseph Fox, is appointed executor. The will was executed November 23, 1908, and witnessed by Frederick Stephan, Jr., and the late Lambert J. DuBois. The value of the estate is $1,000 real estate and $500 personal property. Frederick Stephan, Jr., appeared for the executor.

AUSTRIA DEMANDS TO BE LET ALONE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Vienna, July 25.—"Hands off" is the attitude adopted by the Austrian government in the Austro-Servian crisis. Austria wants the powers to remain aloof so that she can settle her own territorial and racial questions with the little kingdom south of the Danube.

Although there was some display of martial spirit today, for the most part the residents of the capital were apathetic.

The government is in receipt of representations for an extension of time for Servia to reply to the Austrian ultimatum.

Just what action will be taken by Austria in the event of an evasive reply from Belgrade is problematical.

Cipher dispatches from Belgrade indicated that the Servian government would reply to the ultimatum without finding a definite decision on the main demands in the Austrian note. The reply, however, would leave the way open for a second answer which would be more specific in character.

As a result of the pacific representations made to Austria by the powers, it is likely that the door will be opened by which a peaceful, diplomatic settlement can be brought about between the two nations in dispute.

LAWS OF NEW YORK—By Authority.

CHAP. 418.

Became a law April 17, 1914, with the approval of the Governor. Passed, three-fifths being present.

First. New York standard fancy grade shall consist of apples of one variety, which are well-grown specimens, hand-picked, properly packed, of good color for the variety, normal shape, free from dirt, diseases, insect and fungus injury, bruise and other defects except such as are necessarily caused in the operation of packing.

Second. New York standard "A" grade shall consist of apples of one variety which are well-grown specimens, hand-picked, properly packed, of good color for the variety, normal shape, practically free from dirt, diseases, insect and fungus injury, bruises and other defects except such as are necessarily caused in the operation of packing; or apples of one variety which are not more than ten per centum below the foregoing specifications on a combination of all defects or five per centum on any single defect.

Third. New York standard "B" grade shall consist of apples of one variety which are well matured, hand-picked, properly packed, practically normal shape, practically free from dirt, diseases, insect and fungus injury, and which may be of medium or less than medium color for the variety; or apples of one variety which are not more than ten per centum below the foregoing specifications on a combination of all defects or five per centum on any single defect.

Fourth. Unclassified. Apples not conforming to the foregoing specifications of grade, or, if conforming, are not branded in accordance therewith, shall be classed as unclassified and so branded. The minimum size of the fruit in the package shall also be branded upon it as hereinafter specified and in addition to the other marks hereinafter required.

The marks indicating grade as above prescribed may be accompanied by any other designation of grade or brand if that designation or brand is not inconsistent with or marked more conspicuously than the one of the said four marks which is used on the said package. Apples packed and branded in accordance with the United States law approved August third, nineteen hundred and twelve, shall be exempt from the provisions of this act.

The minimum size of the fruit in all classes or grades, including the unclassified, shall be determined by taking the transverse diameter of the smallest fruit in the package at right angles to the stem and blossom end. Minimum sizes shall be stated in variations of one-quarter of an inch, like two inches, two and one-quarter inches, two and one-half inches, two and three-quarter inches, three inches, three and one-quarter inches, and so on, in accordance with the facts.

Minimum sizes may be designated by figures instead of words. The word "minimum" may be designated by using the abbreviation "min."

A tolerance or variation of five per centum on size shall be allowed in all classes, but such five per centum shall not be in addition to the variations or tolerances for defects provided in grades "A" and "B."

§ 2. Every closed package containing apples grown in the state of New York which is packed, sold, distributed, transported or offered or exposed for sale, distribution or transportation in the state by any person shall bear upon the outside of one end in plain letters and figures the name and address of the packer or the person by whose authority the apples were packed and the package marked, the true name of the variety, the grade or class of the apples therein contained and the minimum size of the fruit in the package, as provided by section one. If the true name of the variety shall not be known to the packer or the person by whose authority the package is packed or branded, then such variety shall be designated as "unknown." Every package of apples which is repacked shall bear the name and address of the repacker or the name of the person by whose authority it is repacked in place of that of the original packer.

§ 3. It shall be unlawful for any person within this state, except under the percentages of tolerance and variation as allowed by paragraphs second and third of section one relating to New York standard "A" and "B" grades, to pack, sell, distribute, transport, offer or expose for sale in closed packages apples which are not hand-picked or which are wormy or diseased, or which show fungus or scab injury, unless such fact or facts shall be plainly stated by the use of the words "not hand-picked," "wormy," "diseased," "fungused," or "scabby," as the case may be, said words to be branded upon the outside of the same end of the package on which the marks prescribed by section two shall appear.

§ 4. The marks or brands prescribed by sections one, two and three shall be in block letters and figures of size not less than thirty-six point gothic.

§ 5. It shall be unlawful for any person within the state to pack, sell, distribute, transport, offer or expose for sale, distribution or transportation, apples which are adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act.

§ 6. For the purposes of this act apples packed in a closed package shall be deemed to be misbranded:

First. If the package shall fail to bear all statements required by sections one, two and three.

Second. If the package shall be falsely branded or shall bear any statement, design or device regarding such apples which is false or misleading, or if the package bears any statement, design or device indicating that the apples contained therein are New York "standard grade" and said apples when packed or repacked do not conform to the requirements prescribed by section one of this act.

§ 7. For the purposes of this act apples packed in closed packages shall be deemed to be adulterated if their quality or grade when packed or repacked does not conform to the marks upon the package.

§ 8. Any person who knowingly misbrands or adulterates apples within the meaning of this act, or who knowingly violates any of the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be punished for the first offense by a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars and not less than ten dollars; for the second offense by a fine not exceeding fifty dollars and not less than twenty-five dollars, and for the third and each subsequent offense by a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars and not less than fifty dollars, together, in all cases, with the costs of prosecution.

Whenever any such violation is with respect to a lot or shipment consisting of fifty or more closed packages, there may be imposed in addition to the above penalties twenty-five cents for the first offense, fifty cents for the second offense and one dollar for each subsequent offense for each package in excess of fifty with respect to which such violation is committed.

§ 9. The enforcement of this act shall be vested in the commissioner of agriculture under rules and regulations to be adopted by him.

§ 10. No person shall be prosecuted under the provisions of this act when he can establish a guaranty signed by the person from whom he received such articles to the effect that the same is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act. Said guaranty to be valid shall contain the true name and address of the person or persons making the sale, and in such case the guarantor shall be liable to the penalties of this act.

§ 11. Definitions. The word "person" as used herein shall be construed to include both the singular and plural, individuals, corporations, copartnerships, companies, societies and associations. The act, omission or failure of any officer, agent, servant or employee acting within the scope of his employment or office shall be deemed the act, omission or failure of the principal. The words "closed package" shall mean a box, barrel or other package, the contents of which cannot be seen or inspected when such package is closed. The words "not hand-picked" shall include windfalls, drops and apples shaken or knocked from the tree by any agency.

§ 12. No person shall on behalf of any other person pack any fruit for sale, transportation, or distribution contrary to the provisions of this act.

§ 13. This act shall not apply to unpacked apples actually transported in barrels to storage within this state until the same are removed from storage for the purpose of marketing, sale, transportation or distribution.

I have compared the preceding with the original law on file in this office, and do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript therefrom and of the whole of said original law.

Secretary of State.

EGGS BY PARCEL POST.

I have been shipping eggs by parcel post to private customers since last November, says a contributor to the Rural New Yorker, during which time I had one egg broken and which was my own fault. I get my customers by advertising in the Sunday papers. I am now getting 35 cents a dozen net for the eggs I ship, the customer paying the postage and cartons. In other words, I get 41 cents a dozen for eggs shipped, 6 cents of which is for postage. Thirty-five cents a dozen is the lowest price I have reached this summer.

Now for a few pointed thoughts. It is useless, in my opinion, to try to ship eggs by parcel post unless the person making the shippings is particular in small things. There is a way to pack and a time to ship, and unless these precautions are observed failure is sure to follow. I do not know whether all cartons are properly made to carry eggs. The kind I use are of double corrugated paper and the boxes so made that there are two thicknesses of corrugated board on each side of the box. Inside are the usual compartments for each egg, made of the same material.

wrap each egg in soft tissue paper, cut to a proper size, and then wrap it again in soft brown paper, so as to fill the compartment and not permit it to shake. Care should be taken to have the tissue paper cut so that it can be wrapped loosely around the sides of the eggs, several wraps if possible, and then fold in the paper at the ends. The object sought is to form a soft cushion over the sides of the egg, but be sure that no lumps or knots of paper are formed against the sides of the eggs, which are likely to cause them to break. It is the side of the egg that must be protected rather than the ends. The object of using heavy brown paper is to form additional cushion. The tissue paper is used first for sanitary reasons, preserving the egg and keeping it nice and clean. It is not sufficient to guarantee carrying without breakage. Paper is not all alike in its properties. A harsh brown paper does not make a good cushion for the egg to rest in. Use a soft paper and wrap it loosely, and the egg will withstand the ordinary jarring it receives in transit. The eggs, of course, are placed in the box on ends. Eggs packed in this manner can go anywhere.

I have taken a box of eggs and thrown them across the room to test out and failed to break any. I tried to pack them wrapped in tissue paper only, but stopped that practice when I found that an egg was broken in the second lot sent out under such methods of packing. I have sent them from Philadelphia to Charlotte, N. C., and to Atlanta, Ga. All of them reached the destination safely. I shipped to my customers during the holiday rush and during the blizzard weather last winter and never lost an egg.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Never be stingy in the use of bedding. It adds comfort to the stock and improves the condition of the land.

Feed the horses which work hard good nourishing food and plenty of it. A half fed horse can't work and thrive. A young horse doing the same work as an old one should have as much feed.

Apples given in small quantities make an excellent feed for colts. There is no better way of getting on good terms with the youngsters than by quartering sweet apples and feeding to them from the hand.

Shredded corn fodder is one of the things that have not been fully appreciated on the farm. It is good for bedding the stock, it is convenient to have in the henhouse as a litter, and it is really worth considerable as a feed.

Farmers will be surprised to find how many boarders they have in the dairy herd if they only test their cows for butter fat. The Ohio station found one herd of twelve cows that had eleven boarders. By boarders are meant cows that do not pay for their keep.

In order to get the most out of oilmeal for hogs it should be mixed with boiling water and allowed to stand a few hours before mixing with the other slop. Some feeders get good results by feeding it dry, but their equipment is different from that of the average pork raiser.

Sugar and Cement.

Tests have shown that as little as one-quarter of one per cent of sugar will prevent cement settling, while from one to two per cent will make it set quickly, but later disintegrate.

WOMAN WANTS U. S. SENATORSHIP.

(Mrs. James J. Brown.)

New York, July 25.—Because she has had everything else wanted ever since a child, Mrs. James J. Brown of Denver, wealthy suffragist, now wants to be a United States senator in 1915. "I want to be a senator," Mrs. Brown says, "because I have done about everything else." State Senator Helen Ring Robinson of Colorado, believes that conditions are now ripe for Mrs. Brown to start her campaign for the nomination to succeed Charles S. Thomas, whose term expires next year.

GAIETY GIRL DIVORCES HUSBAND OF TWO YEARS.

(Gabrielle Ray.)

London, July 25.—After having scorned the offers of earls and dukes, and even a king, it is said, to marry Eric Loder, Gabriella Ray, the beautiful gaiety girl, has divorced Loder after two years of unhappy wedded life. Miss Ray married Loder in March, 1912, after having forgotten for a full day her appointment to wed. The girl's "forgetfulness" was considered by both her friends and those of the wealthy young Englishman she married, a bad omen.

CRETONNE CUSHION CHAIRS.

This is a cretonne season so far as house furnishing is concerned. Cretonnes face us on every side. They are used to cover walls, as door or window hangings, as bed coverings and even in upholstering summer furniture.

Two attractive summer chairs of wicker are pictured here. Owing to their shape, the mattress style of cushion is not adapted to them. They have cushions covered with handsome cretonne in futurist patterns.

SUMMER SHOPPING.

Leisurely and Systematic Ways of Doing It Will Prevent Exhaustion.

A plentiful supply of small change is often of great help to the summer shopper. Much tedious waiting may be avoided if one always has the right change. In most of the department stores, of course, shoppers must wait for certain formalities to be gone through with, whether they are to receive change or not. But at certain counters in these stores—at the notion counter usually and sometimes where toilet goods and soaps are sold—the shopper who has the exact change may pocket her purchase and leave immediately. And in anything but a department store exact change makes quick purchasing easy.

If you feel tired while shopping, rest. Exhaustion from heat can almost always be avoided. Rest is one way to avoid it. There are pleasant rest rooms in most of the big department stores, clean and comfortable, where you can relax for half an hour, an hour if need be, and regain strength and composure.

If you are very tired, if your head throbs with heat, if you feel really ill from fatigue and warmth, select a comfortable chair, take off your hat, close your eyes and force yourself to relax. As soon as you are really refreshed go home. Leave the rest of the shopping for another day.

The slogan "Shop early!" ought to be sounded in the summer time, both for the shopper and for the clerk, for in summer the early part of the day is surely the coolest. Moreover, in most of the big cities the stores close early in summer, and the woman who shops late in the afternoon is keeping the clerks from much desired rest and recreation.

Cutting Small Pieces of Ice.

When you have a large cake of ice and want a small piece to put in a glass you are somewhat helpless if you have no ice pick at hand. Use an ordinary pin instead of an ice pick and you can have the ice in pieces the size you desire.

Press the pin into the ice as far as it will go and work it back and forth slowly and steadily until the ice splits. Then put the pin in a new place and make another cleft. In this way you can break off piece after piece of any desired size.

THE FASHION BUDGET.

Tub dresses are made with straight gored skirts.

White serge suits are brightened by a touch of brilliant color.

Amber tipped parasols are an English idea that seems to take.

(Miss Kate Barnard.)

Washington, July 25.—"The last act is the conspiracy to rob and despoil Indian minors," is the characterization given the clause in the Indian appropriation bill now in conference between the house and senate authorizing payments of $4,000,000 to the Indians of Oklahoma, by Miss Kate Barnard, Commissioner of Charities and Correction of the State of Oklahoma. Miss Barnard shows in a long and involved statement that her department, charged with the duty of protecting Indian minors, has been wrecked by legislators who refused appropriations to carry on the work. She says that the abolition of her department, the Indian minors' only protection, will put the $4,000,000 appropriation for the children, into the pockets of political grafters.

Recipe for Long Youth.

Old age can be cured. The prescription is a simple one: mix open air and a hobby, shake well, and take as many hours a day as possible. No one begins to age until he is bored, and the first gray hair comes when a man suddenly thinks to himself: "What's the use?" Then is the time when a hobby makes life interesting again.—Lippincott's.

FIRES CHAUFFEUR WHOSE AFFECTIONS SHE "ALIENATED."

(Miss Eleanor A. McGill.)

Jersey City, N. J., July 25.—Having cost her $8,500 already as the result of an alienation suit, Miss Eleanor A. McGill, the heiress, precluded the possibility of further expense on his account by bouncing her chauffeur, Walter G. Mayer. Charging that her husband and Miss McGill were the principals in numerous pajama and hair combing parties, Mrs. Mayor brought suit against the heiress for the alienation of her husband's affections. She was awarded a verdict of $8,500. The woman then started suit for divorce. Mayer was ordered to pay her $7 a week while the suit was pending. The chauffeur has asked to have this weekly alimony stopped because he is out of work.

Checking Up.

A Providence merchant believed thoroughly in advertising.

"I get queer answers sometimes," said he, "when I ask my customers, as I frequently do, what publication they saw my ad. in.

"As a rule they reply courteously enough, but sometimes a man takes the question as an affront. One pompous old fellow told me it was none of my business. Another advised me to hire a checking clerk. One languid and nonchalant young man referred me to his valet. But I was worst taken back by a roughly dressed customer to whom I put the usual question:

"What magazine, may I ask, did you see my ad. in?"

"In all of them, sir," he replied indignantly. "Did you think, sir, from my appearance, that I read only one?"—Buffalo Express.

Force of Habit.

The telephone operator was spending the summer holiday by the bounding sea. On the first morning, however, she had occasion to berate the maid of the lodgings for real or imagined negligence. "Why didn't you call me as I told you this morning?" she demanded. "I did, miss," replied the maid with an injured air. "I called out 'Seven-thirty,' and all you ses was 'Number engaged.'"

Conscientious Student.

"You admit that you are not smart enough to tell railroad people how to run their business!" "Without hesitation." "But I thought you had made a study of railroad problems?" "I have. But I haven't yet gotten far enough along to thoroughly understand even their time tables."

ATTELL CHALLENGES WELSH.

(Abe Attell.)

London, July 25.—Carrying a challenge to battle Freddie Welsh for that newly acquired lightweight title, Abe Attell, the former king of the featherweights, has arrived in London. There is every reason to believe that unless Welsh has decided to retire from the ring for the time being, Abe will be accommodated. Attell would draw a big crowd here and Welsh could enter the ring with him with little danger of his lightweight championship.

Nautical.

It was in New York. The sea-faring man was steering a zig-zag course, yawing now to starboard and now to port. A young woman bound in the opposite direction sought to minimize the danger of a collision by making a wide detour. But the sea-faring man stopped dead. "Keep a straight course ahead, miss," he said gallantly; "let me do the tacking."

EGGS BY PARCEL POST.

I have been shipping eggs by parcel post to private customers since last November, says a contributor to the Rural New Yorker, during which time I had one egg broken and which was my own fault. I get my customers by advertising in the Sunday papers. I am now getting 35 cents a dozen net for the eggs I ship, the customer paying the postage and cartons. In other words, I get 41 cents a dozen for eggs shipped, 6 cents of which is for postage. Thirty-five cents a dozen is the lowest price I have reached this summer.

Now for a few pointed thoughts. It is useless, in my opinion, to try to ship eggs by parcel post unless the person making the shippings is particular in small things. There is a way to pack and a time to ship, and unless these precautions are observed failure is sure to follow. I do not know whether all cartons are properly made to carry eggs. The kind I use are of double corrugated paper and the boxes so made that there are two thicknesses of corrugated board on each side of the box. Inside are the usual compartments for each egg, made of the same material.

wrap each egg in soft tissue paper, cut to a proper size, and then wrap it again in soft brown paper, so as to fill the compartment and not permit it to shake. Care should be taken to have the tissue paper cut so that it can be wrapped loosely around the sides of the eggs, several wraps if possible, and then fold in the paper at the ends. The object sought is to form a soft cushion over the sides of the egg, but be sure that no lumps or knots of paper are formed against the sides of the eggs, which are likely to cause them to break. It is the side of the egg that must be protected rather than the ends. The object of using heavy brown paper is to form additional cushion. The tissue paper is used first for sanitary reasons, preserving the egg and keeping it nice and clean. It is not sufficient to guarantee carrying without breakage. Paper is not all alike in its properties. A harsh brown paper does not make a good cushion for the egg to rest in. Use a soft paper and wrap it loosely, and the egg will withstand the ordinary jarring it receives in transit. The eggs, of course, are placed in the box on ends. Eggs packed in this manner can go anywhere.

I have taken a box of eggs and thrown them across the room to test out and failed to break any. I tried to pack them wrapped in tissue paper only, but stopped that practice when I found that an egg was broken in the second lot sent out under such methods of packing. I have sent them from Philadelphia to Charlotte, N. C., and to Atlanta, Ga. All of them reached the destination safely. I shipped to my customers during the holiday rush and during the blizzard weather last winter and never lost an egg.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Never be stingy in the use of bedding. It adds comfort to the stock and improves the condition of the land.

Feed the horses which work hard good nourishing food and plenty of it. A half fed horse can't work and thrive. A young horse doing the same work as an old one should have as much feed.

Apples given in small quantities make an excellent feed for colts. There is no better way of getting on good terms with the youngsters than by quartering sweet apples and feeding to them from the hand.

Shredded corn fodder is one of the things that have not been fully appreciated on the farm. It is good for bedding the stock, it is convenient to have in the henhouse as a litter, and it is really worth considerable as a feed.

Farmers will be surprised to find how many boarders they have in the dairy herd if they only test their cows for butter fat. The Ohio station found one herd of twelve cows that had eleven boarders. By boarders are meant cows that do not pay for their keep.

In order to get the most out of oilmeal for hogs it should be mixed with boiling water and allowed to stand a few hours before mixing with the other slop. Some feeders get good results by feeding it dry, but their equipment is different from that of the average pork raiser.

Sugar and Cement.

Tests have shown that as little as one-quarter of one per cent of sugar will prevent cement settling, while from one to two per cent will make it set quickly, but later disintegrate.

WOMAN WANTS U. S. SENATORSHIP.

(Mrs. James J. Brown.)

New York, July 25.—Because she has had everything else wanted ever since a child, Mrs. James J. Brown of Denver, wealthy suffragist, now wants to be a United States senator in 1915. "I want to be a senator," Mrs. Brown says, "because I have done about everything else." State Senator Helen Ring Robinson of Colorado, believes that conditions are now ripe for Mrs. Brown to start her campaign for the nomination to succeed Charles S. Thomas, whose term expires next year.

GAIETY GIRL DIVORCES HUSBAND OF TWO YEARS.

(Gabrielle Ray.)

London, July 25.—After having scorned the offers of earls and dukes, and even a king, it is said, to marry Eric Loder, Gabriella Ray, the beautiful gaiety girl, has divorced Loder after two years of unhappy wedded life. Miss Ray married Loder in March, 1912, after having forgotten for a full day her appointment to wed. The girl's "forgetfulness" was considered by both her friends and those of the wealthy young Englishman she married, a bad omen.

CURE FOR OLD AGE

A GOOD WAY TO CHEAT DEATH.

The Prescription Is to Mix Open Air and a Hobby, Shake Well and Take as Many Hours a Day or Night as Possible—The Cure In Real Life.

Old age can be cured. The prescription is a simple one. Mix open air and a hobby, shake well and take as many hours a day as possible. No one begins to age until he is bored, and the first gray hair comes when a man suddenly thinks to himself, "What's the use?" Then is the time when a hobby makes life interesting again.

There was an official on one of our great railroads who was retired at seventy. "He'll die now," said his friends kindly. But he didn't. Instead, he became interested in the wild flowers, and now he is too busy in looking for the ram's head orchid and trying to find a new station for the hart's tongue fern and tramping around in the woods and fields in all kinds of weather even to think of dying. Anyway, he would not have time until he's finished his monograph on the willows of the United States.

There is a woman in Baltimore, seventy-two years old, who years ago sought to forget a great sorrow by learning the butterflies. Her city home has become a rendezvous for entomologists all over the world and houses a famous collection. While her contemporaries are dozing their lives away in caps and easy chairs she spends her summers in the mountains and her winters in Florida with a butterfly net. Twenty-one new species to identify are her contribution to the lepidoptera, and she plans to live until the last goal of an entomologist is reached—the using of her single initial species.

An octet of men in Philadelphia, all well past their threescore years, some in business and some foot loose, belong to the same ornithological society. They are afield every day of the year, rain or shine, to watch the ever changing bird life. In the spring each prepares migrant sheets showing the arrivals of the hundred odd migrants that pass through every place every year. There is great rivalry as to who shall score the most warblers or identify the largest number of birds in one day. At present writing the oldest of the eight holds a record of seventy-five different kinds of birds seen or heard in one day between dawn and dark—one for each year of his age and one to grow on.

A man in North Carolina by the sudden death of two of his family was left alone with but little money, no friends and the cheering dictum from his doctor that he had only a year to live. To while away the few months still left to him as well as to help out his household expenses he took up the study of edible mushrooms. At the end of a year in the open he notified his indignant physician that he had become too much interested in his hobby to confirm his diagnosis. In ten years he has discovered, classified and tested 170 kinds of edible mushrooms and has published a book which is one of the standard authorities for mushroom eaters of the world.

Another septuagenarian attributes his long life to the stars. Confined to business during the day, he sought the open air at night and began to study the changing constellations and the perplexing planets. Then he found that with an opera glass he could detect their colors and reveled in the blue light of Vega, the green glare of Sirius, the rose red of Aldebaran, the flame color of Betelguese and the strange shades of other gleaming sky kings. Finally he bought a small telescope. Now, at seventy, he has published a monograph on the double stars, besides a quaint little star guide that has interested thousands in his hobby.

None of the nature studies requires much money or time. A cheap illustrated guidebook, an opera glass and, if possible, some walks and talks with an expert, and you will learn almost immediately to identify a score or more of flowers, or birds, or constellations, or mushrooms, and you will have found a hobby on which you may ride away from Death.

Try it, young men, lest you grow old. Try it, old men, before you grow tired. Escape into the open from these narrow indoor days and learn the way to where the wild folk dwell. In their land you will find the help of the hills and hope wide as the world, and strength, and youth, and happiness. Try it.—Samuel Scoville, Jr., in Lippincott's.

Across the Atlantic.

The narrowest part of the Atlantic is between Brazil and Guinea, where the ocean is only about 1,800 miles wide. From Newfoundland to Ireland, the narrowest breadth north of the equator, is nearly twice as far. From New York to the nearest point of France is nearly three times as far.

The Lesser Evil.

"It's Mr. Boreleigh. I think I'll send him word I'm out."

"Oh, yes, but I'd rather listen to the still, small voice than to Mr. Boreleigh's."—Boston Transcript.

Section forty-five of chapter fifty-seven of the laws of nineteen hundred and nine, entitled "An act relating to state charities, constituting chapter fifty-five of the consolidated laws," as amended by chapter one hundred and forty-nine of the laws of nineteen hundred and nine, and chapter nine of the laws of nineteen hundred and eleven, and chapter four hundred and five of the laws of nineteen hundred and eleven, and chapter six hundred and sixty-three of the laws of nineteen hundred and thirteen, is hereby amended to read as follows:

§ 45. Quarterly or monthly estimates of expenses; contingent fund. The superintendent or other managing officer of each of the state institutions reporting to the fiscal supervisor shall quarterly or monthly, and upon such day as the fiscal supervisor shall direct, cause to be prepared triplicate estimates, in such detail as may be required by the fiscal supervisor, of the expense required for the institution of which he has the supervision, for the ensuing quarter or month. He shall countersign and submit two of such triplicates to the fiscal supervisor and retain the other to be placed on file in the office of the institution. The fiscal supervisor shall cause such estimates to be revised either as to quantity or quality of supplies and the estimated cost thereof, and shall certify that he has carefully examined the same and that the articles contained in such estimate, as revised and approved by him, are actually required for the use of the institution and shall thereupon present such estimate and certificate to the comptroller. Upon the revision and approval of such estimate the comptroller shall authorize the board of managers, trustees or other managing officers of such institution to make drafts on him as the money may be required for the purposes mentioned in such estimates, which draft shall be paid on his warrant out of the funds in the treasury of the state appropriated for the support of such institution. In every such estimate there shall be a sum named, not to exceed two hundred and twenty-five quarterly, or seventy-five dollars as a monthly contingent fund, for which a minute detailed statement shall be made. No expenditures shall be made from such contingent fund, except in case of actual emergency requiring immediate action, or except for such articles as may be previously approved by the fiscal supervisor. The treasurer of any such institution shall pay no accounts unless they are contained in the estimate provided in this section and duly approved by the fiscal supervisor. Nor shall the treasury of any such institution named or referred to in this section pay accounts for supplies furnished to officers or employees, unless the same be drawn from the ordinary supplies provided for the general use of the institution. No persons, other than the officers and employees of such institution, and the families of the superintendents, medical officers, adjutants, quartermasters or stewards, necessarily residing therein, shall be allowed room and maintenance, except at a rate fixed by the state comptroller and the fiscal supervisor with the approval of the governor.

The superintendent of each of the state institutions reporting to the fiscal supervisor shall personally inspect and pass upon all articles abandoned for use, and report to the fiscal supervisor at such time and on such forms as may be directed by him.

Any general expenses necessarily and lawfully incurred by the fiscal supervisor for, or on account of one or more of the institutions reporting to him, shall be apportioned to such institution or institutions on the basis of the number of inmates, and included in the estimates of such institution or institutions in the manner provided by this section.

§ 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

§ 2. Expenses. The salary and expenses of the supervisor and of his subordinates shall be charged to personal loan companies and personal loan brokers subject to the provisions of this act in such proportion as the supervisor shall deem just and equitable, and shall be collected and paid in the same manner as are similar expenses of the banking department.

§ 3. Duties of supervisor. The supervisor, subject to the general direction and control of the superintendent, shall exercise the powers conferred and perform the duties imposed upon him by this act. He shall, from time to time, prescribe rules and regulations with regard to the conduct of the business of personal loan companies and personal loan brokers. He shall annually, on or before the first Wednesday of January, transmit to the superintendent a report to the legislature of his activities, with such recommendations and suggestions as he may deem necessary.

§ 4. Organization certificate of personal loan company. Three or more persons, two of whom shall be citizens of the United States, and at least one of whom shall be a citizen of the state of New York, may form a corporation to be known as a "personal loan company." Such persons shall subscribe, acknowledge and submit to the supervisor at his office an organization certificate in duplicate, which shall specifically state:

1. The name of the corporation which shall include the words "personal loan company;"

2. The place where its business is to be transacted;

3. The amount of its capital stock, which shall not be less than ten thousand dollars, if the place where its business is to be transacted is in a city of the first or second class, nor less than five thousand dollars, if the place where its business is to be transacted is in a city of the third class, or a village or town;

4. The particular city, town or village in which such business is to be transacted and the location by street and number of the office or place of business therein.

§ 6. When designation of resident agent of personal loan broker required. A person who is not a resident of this state, or a partnership or unincorporated association, at least one member of which is not a resident of the state, shall not receive an authorization to transact business under this act unless such person, partnership or association shall file with the supervisor of personal loans, in a form approved by him, a designation of a resident agent within the state, upon whom all legal process may be served, in any proceeding arising under the provisions of this act, with the same effect as if served upon such person, partnership or incorporated association. Every such designation shall state the full name of the private and office or business address of the agent.

§ 7. Return of defective certificate; filing for examination. If a certificate of a personal loan company or personal loan broker fail to comply with the requirements of this act, the supervisor shall forthwith return such certificate for amendment, calling attention to defects therein. If such certificate complies, or shall have been so amended as to comply, with the requirements of this act, the supervisor shall forthwith endorse upon each of the duplicates of such certificate over his official signature the words "filed for examination," with the date of such endorsement.

§ 8. Investigation of proposed company or broker; refusal or approval; filing certificate. If the supervisor be satisfied that the persons named in the certificate filed for examination are of such character, responsibility and general fitness as to command confidence and warrant belief that the business of the proposed corporation or personal loan broker will be honestly and efficiently conducted in accordance with the intent and purposes of this act, and that the public convenience and advantage will be promoted by allowing such proposed company or personal loan broker to engage in business, he shall, within thirty days after the filing of such certificate for examination, endorse upon each of the duplicates thereof over his official signature the word "approved," or if he be not so satisfied the word "refused," with the date of such endorsement. In case of refusal he shall forthwith return one of the duplicates so endorsed to the proposed incorporators or personal loan broker from whom the certificate was received. In case of approval he shall forthwith give notice thereof to the proposed incorporators or personal loan broker, and file one of the duplicate certificates in his own office and the other in the office of the clerk of the county in which is located the place of business of such proposed company or personal loan broker.

§ 9. When corporate existence begins; conditions precedent to commencing business. When the supervisor shall have approved the organization certificate of a personal loan company, its corporate existence shall begin, and it shall have power to elect officers and transact such business as relates to its organization. It shall transact no other business until

1. Not less than one-fifth of its capital stock, and not less in any event than the minimum amount of capital stock required by section four of this act shall have been fully paid in in cash, and an affidavit stating that it has been so paid, subscribed and sworn to by the two principal officers shall have been filed in the clerk's office of the county in which its place of business is located, and a certified copy thereof filed in the office of the supervisor;

2. The bond submitted by it to the supervisor as required by this act shall have been approved by him;

3. The supervisor shall have duly issued to it the authorization certificate specified in this act.

§ 10. Bond. Every personal loan company and personal loan broker shall file with the supervisor a bond executed by a surety company authorized to transact business in this state, and in an amount equal to one-tenth of the capital stock of such company, or one-tenth the permanent capital of such broker, not less in any case than three thousand dollars, conditioned upon the faithful observance by such company or broker of the provisions of law and of this act and of the regulations made hereunder. Such bond shall be approved by the supervisor, and by its terms continue in full force for two years after such company or broker has ceased to transact business in this state, unless sooner released by the supervisor. Any person claiming to be injured by a violation of this act by a personal loan company or broker may, with the written consent of the supervisor, maintain an action upon the bond of such company or broker.

§ 11. Authorization certificate. If the supervisor be satisfied from examination and investigation made by him that a company or personal loan broker whose certificate he has approved and filed has complied with all the conditions precedent to commencing business imposed by this act, he shall, within sixty days after the filing of such certificate for examination, but in no case after the expiration of such period, issue under his hand and official seal in triplicate, an authorization certificate, stating that the company or personal loan broker named in such certificate has complied with the provisions of this act, and is authorized to transact the business specified in such certificate. One of such triplicates shall be transmitted to the company or personal loan broker, one shall be filed in the office of the supervisor and the third shall be filed by the supervisor in the county clerk's office of the county wherein the organization certificate of such company or the certificate of the personal loan broker shall have been filed by him. The supervisor and such county clerk shall, respectively, attach such authorization certificate to such organization certificate or personal loan broker's certificate previously filed in his office, and shall record both certificates in the book of records of incorporation therein.

§ 12. Display of authorization certificate. Every authorization certificate shall be kept posted at all times in a prominent place in the office of the personal loan company or broker.

§ 13. Revocation of authorization certificate. If the supervisor be satisfied that a personal loan company or personal loan broker to which he shall have issued an authorization certificate is violating any of the provisions of this act, or any of the regulations made hereunder, or is conducting its business in an unauthorized or unsafe manner, or is in an unsound or unsafe condition to transact its business, the supervisor may, over his official signature and seal of office, notify the holder thereof that the same is revoked. Such notice shall be executed in triplicate, and the supervisor shall forthwith transmit one copy to the holder of such certificate, file one in his office, and file the third in the office of the clerk of the county in which such authorization certificate shall have been filed. The supervisor may, in his discretion, publish a copy of such notice, with such other facts as he may deem proper, for six successive days in the paper published at Albany in which public notices of the state are required to be published.

§ 14. General powers of personal loan company or broker. Every personal loan company shall have the powers conferred by the general corporation law and the business corporations law, including the powers to make loans in its discretion at the legal rate of interest, and every such company and every personal loan broker, subject to the limitations contained in this act, may, when authorized by the supervisor,

1. Act as a pawnbroker without being required to obtain a license or file a bond other than the authorization certificate and bond required by this act;

2. Make small loans to necessitous borrowers upon any of the following securities:

(a) Mortgages upon personal property without the actual delivery of the property,

(b) Notes of the borrower endorsed or guaranteed by another person,

(c) An assignment or order for the payment of salary or wages by the borrower or another person, subject to the provisions of this act.

3. Charge interest upon loans made in accordance with the provisions of subdivisions one and two of this section, subject to the conditions and limitations of this act.

§ 15. Restrictions upon amount of loans, interest and charges. Every personal loan company and personal loan broker shall be subject to the following restrictions upon the making of loans and on charges for interest and services in connection therewith:

1. No loan made under subdivisions one and two of section fourteen of this act shall exceed two hundred dollars, nor shall any person owe such company or loan broker more than two hundred dollars for principal at any one time;

2. Interest on loans made as a pawnbroker shall not exceed three per centum per month, and no charge of any kind shall be made by such company or broker when acting as a pawnbroker;

3. Interest on loans made as provided in subdivision two of section fourteen of this act shall not be charged at a rate to exceed two per centum per month;

4. Interest shall not be charged or collected in advance and shall be computed only on unpaid balances;

5. For a loan exceeding fifty dollars there may be made, except in case of loan made as pawnbroker, a charge of not more than two dollars for examination or investigation of the property mortgaged or investigation of the character and circumstances of the borrower, endorser or surety, and for all other expenses including the drawing and filing of necessary papers. If the loan be fifty dollars or less such charge shall not be more than one dollar. No such charge shall be made on any loan or renewal thereof oftener than once in each period of twelve months.

6. No such charge shall be imposed upon any one borrower for any new or additional loan made within three months after any such charge has been imposed;

7. No charge whatsoever shall be made unless or until a loan shall have been made as a result of an examination;

8. No charge shall be made for the collection of debts except the legal costs in actions to enforce the security or upon the entry of judgment.

1. Upon repayment of the loan in full, mark indelibly in the presence of the borrower every paper signed by him with the word "paid" or "canceled" and discharge any mortgages, restore any pledges, return any notes, and cancel any assignments given by the borrower as security;

2. Furnish the borrower at the time the loan is made a statement in the English language showing in clear and distinct terms the amount of the loan, the date of the loan, the security of the loan, the person to whom the loan is made, the name of the lender and the amount and rate of interest charged. Upon such statement there shall be printed in English a copy of section fifteen of this act;

3. Give to the borrower a plain and complete receipt for all payments made on account of the loan at the time such payments are made, and shall not take any confession of judgment, any power of attorney or any instrument that does not state the actual amount of the loan in question, the time for which it is made and the rate of interest, or any instrument in which blanks are left to be filled after execution;

4. Take every mortgage, note assignment, agreement or contract, in connection with such business in the name of the company or in the name of the individual broker, with the addition in the case of such individual of the descriptive words "personal loan broker."

§ 17. Restrictions on assignment of wages or salary. An assignment or order for the payment of future salary or wages given as security for a loan shall be valid for a period not exceeding one year from the making of such assignment or order, and a sum not exceeding ten per centum of the borrower's salary or wages shall be collectible therefrom under such an assignment or order at the time of each payment of salary or wages, if the amount of the loan shall not have been paid. Such assignment or order shall not be subject to the provisions of section forty-two of the personal property law. If such assignment or order be made by a married man or woman living at the time the assignment or order is made, or at any time within five months prior thereto, with the wife or husband, as the case may be, the assignment or order shall be accompanied by the written assent of the wife or the husband of the assignor, or the assignment or order shall be invalid.

§ 18. Restriction on place of transacting business. A personal loan company or personal loan broker shall not

1. Transact or solicit business under any other name or at any other office or place than that designated in the authorization certificate issued to such company or broker, except as provided in section nineteen of this act;

2. Maintain an office or place of business in the same room in which any other business is transacted or in a room connected with or opening into a room in which any other business is conducted.

§ 19. Branch offices. A personal loan broker shall not establish any branch office or offices. A personal loan company located and doing business in a city of the first or second class may open and occupy one or more branch offices, upon obtaining the approval of the supervisor by certificate filed in his office and in the office of the county clerk of the county in which the certificate of authorization of such company is filed. Every such company shall have a capital of ten thousand dollars for every branch office established, in addition to the capital required by this act.

§ 20. Restriction on payment of dividends by personal loan company. Every personal loan company may pay a dividend on its capital stock, subject to the following conditions and limitations:

1. In determining net profits no more than a reasonable deduction shall be made for expenses, including salaries;

2. The total dividends declared in any one year shall not amount to more than twelve per centum of the capital;

3. If the net profits amount to more than twelve per centum of its capital, such personal loan company shall comply with any order of the supervisor reducing the rates of interest or charges which may be made by it.

§ 21. Restriction on profits of personal loan broker. A personal loan broker shall not in any year pay or take out of his business profits amounting to more than twelve per centum of the capital invested in the business, provided that a reasonable deduction may be made for expenses and salaries, including his own services. The supervisor, upon ascertaining that any such broker has during the previous calendar year, made a net profit amounting to more than twelve per centum of his capital, shall have authority, after ten days' notice to such broker, to make an order reducing the interest and charges which such broker may lawfully make to such an extent as will, in his judgment, yield a net annual profit of not more than twelve per centum of the capital.

§ 22. Change of location. A personal loan company or personal loan broker may, with the approval of the supervisor, change the place of business authorized in its authorization certificate to another place in the same town, village or borough or city if a city be not divided into boroughs. Authority for such change shall be evidenced by a certificate of the supervisor filed in his office and in the office of the county clerk of the county in which the authorization certificate of such company or broker is filed.

§ 23. Examinations. The supervisor shall, either personally or by examiners of the banking department, examine every personal loan company and broker at least once each year, and oftener if deemed necessary or expedient. On every such examination inquiry shall be made as to the condition and resources, the mode of conducting and managing affairs, the action of its directors, if a corporation, the investment of its funds, the safety and prudence of its management, the security afforded to those by whom its engagements are held, whether the requirements of the authorization certificate and of law have been complied with, and as to such other matters as the supervisor may prescribe. For the purposes of any such examination the supervisor shall have free access to the vaults, books, securities and papers of the company or broker so examined. The supervisor and every such examiner shall have power to administer an oath to any person whose testimony may be required on the examination of any such company or personal loan broker, whether in any way connected with such company or broker or not, and to compel the appearance and attendance of any such person for the purpose of any such examination. If the examination shall be made by the supervisor, or by one or more examiners who are compensated by salary only, no examination charge shall be made except for necessary traveling and other actual expenses.

§ 24. Reports of examiners. Every examiner shall make a written report on oath to the supervisor of the result of his examination. Such reports shall be confidential communications and shall not be made public, unless in the judgment of the supervisor, the ends of justice or the public advantage will be served by the publication thereof, in which event he may publish a copy of any such report or any part thereof in at least one daily newspaper published in the county where the principal place of business of such company or personal loan broker is located, or in such other manner as he may deem proper.

§ 25. Reports to supervisors; penalty for failure to make. On or before the first day of February in each year, every personal loan company and broker shall make a written report to the supervisor which shall contain a statement of its condition on the morning of the first day of January in said year, in the form and contain the matters prescribed by the supervisor.

Every such report shall be verified by the oaths of the president and secretary of such company, or by such personal loan broker. The verification shall state that the report is true and correct in all respects to the best of the knowledge and belief of the person or persons verifying it, and that the usual business of the company or broker has been transacted at the location required by this act and not elsewhere.

Every such company and broker shall also make any other special reports to the supervisor which he may from time to time require, which shall be in such form and filed at such date as may be prescribed by the supervisor and shall, if required by him, be verified in such manner as he may prescribe.

Every such company within ten days after declaring a dividend, shall make written report to the supervisor stating the amount of such dividend, and the amount of its net earnings in excess thereof. Such report shall be verified by the oath of the president or treasurer of the company.

If any such company or broker shall fail to make any report required by this section on or before the day designated for the making thereof, or shall fail to include therein any matter required by the supervisor, it shall forfeit to the people of the state the sum of one hundred dollars for every day that such report shall be delayed or withheld, and for every day that it shall fail to report any such omitted matter, unless the time therefor shall have been extended by the supervisor.

§ 26. Orders of supervisor to delinquent personal loan companies or brokers. 1. To discontinue unlawful or unsafe practices. Whenever it shall appear to the supervisor that any personal loan company or broker to which this act is applicable has violated the certificate of authorization or any law or regulation or is conducting its business in an unauthorized or unsafe manner, he may issue an order directing the discontinuance of such unauthorized or unsafe practices and require the delinquent to appear before him at a time fixed in the order to explain such practices.

2. To make good impairment of capital. Whenever it shall appear to the supervisor that capital stock of any such company or the permanent capital of any such broker has been reduced in value below the requirements of law or of its certificate of authorization, he may issue an order directing that such company or broker make good such deficiency within sixty days from the date of such order.

3. To keep books and accounts as prescribed. Whenever it shall appear to the supervisor that any personal loan company or broker does not keep its books and accounts in such manner as to enable him readily to ascertain its true condition, he may issue an order requiring such company or broker, or the officers or agents thereof, or any of them, to open and keep such books or accounts as he may, in his discretion, determine and prescribe the manner for keeping accurate and convenient records of the transactions and accounts of such company or broker.

§ 27. Publications. No personal loan company or personal loan broker shall print, publish or distribute, or cause to be printed, published or distributed, any written or printed statement with regard to the rates, terms or conditions for the lending of money which is false or calculated to deceive. Every personal loan company or personal loan broker, authorized by the supervisor to transact business under this act, shall include a statement of such fact as a part of every advertisement of the business of such company or broker. Any person, partnership or company violating this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

§ 28. Priority of assessments, penalties and forfeitures. In case of the insolvency or voluntary or involuntary liquidation of any company or broker to which this act is applicable, all unpaid charges lawfully assessed by the supervisor, and all unpaid penalties or forfeitures incurred under this act, shall be entitled to priority of payment from the assets of such company or broker.

§ 29. Communications from supervisor. Every official communication directed by the supervisor to a personal loan company, or to any officer thereof, relating to an investigation or examination conducted by him, or containing suggestions or recommendations as to the conduct of the business of such company, shall be submitted by the officer receiving it to the board of directors at its next meeting, and recorded in its book of minutes.

§ 30. Investigations by supervisor. The supervisor shall have power to investigate all violations or alleged violations of this act, that come to his attention, shall make all reasonable efforts to discover the same and shall notify the proper prosecuting officer whenever he has reasonable grounds to believe that a violation has occurred. He shall act as complainant in prosecutions under this act and shall otherwise assist in the prosecution of violators thereof.

§ 31. Offender a competent witness. A person violating any provision of this act is a competent witness against any other person so violating this act, and may be compelled to attend and testify upon any trial, hearing or proceeding, or investigation, in the same manner as any other person. But the testimony so given shall not be used in any prosecution or proceeding, civil or criminal, against the person so testifying; nor shall a person so testifying be thereafter liable to indictment, prosecution or punishment for such violation, and may plead or prove the giving of testimony accordingly, in bar of such indictment or prosecution.

§ 32. Penalty for collection of illegal interest or charges. No person or corporation other than persons or corporations transacting business pursuant to the provisions of this act, shall directly or indirectly charge or receive any interest, discount or consideration greater than the legal rate of interest upon the loan, use or forbearance of money, goods or things in action of the value of two hundred dollars or less, or upon the loan, use or sale of personal credit in any wise, where there is taken for such loan, use or sale of personal credit any security upon any household furniture, apparatus or appliances, sewing machine, plate or silver ware in actual use, tools or implements of trade, wearing apparel or jewelry.

The foregoing prohibition shall apply to any person who, as security for any such loan, use or forbearance of money, or for any such loan, use or sale of personal credit as aforesaid, makes a pretended purchase of property from any person and permits the owner or pledgor to retain the possession thereof, or who, by any device or pretense of charging for his services or otherwise, seeks to obtain a larger compensation in any case hereinbefore provided for.

Any person, and the several officers of any corporation, who shall violate the foregoing prohibition, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon proof of such fact the debt shall be discharged and the security shall be void. But this section shall not apply to licensed pawnbrokers, making loans upon the actual and permanent deposit of personal property as security; nor shall this section affect the validity or legality of any loan of money or credit exceeding two hundred dollars in amount.

§ 33. Penalty for unlawfully engaging in personal loan business. No person or corporation shall, except as authorized by this act, make any loans, endorsements or guarantees, either directly or indirectly, in sums of two hundred dollars or less, for which loans, endorsements or guarantees any charge, interest, discount or consideration is made or taken in excess of six per centum per annum. No individual, partnership, unincorporated association or corporation shall, directly or indirectly, engage or offer to engage in the business of negotiating or arranging any transaction herein prohibited, or aiding the borrower or lender either to procure or to make any such loans. A violation of any of the provisions of this section shall be a misdemeanor, whether or not such loans are actually made.

Any person or corporation purchasing or discounting such notes or loans of two hundred dollars or less, or endorsing, guaranteeing or becoming surety for the payment of any such notes or loans for compensation or for value of any kind, or furnishing security therefor or procuring any endorser, guarantor or surety therefor, for compensation or value of any kind, without having been first authorized so to do under the provisions of this act, shall be presumed to have violated the provisions of this section.

§ 34. Evidence of violations. Violation by an agent shall be prima facie evidence of assent by his principal. Violation by a member of a partnership shall be prima facie evidence of assent by each member of the partnership. Violation by a director, trustee, an officer or agent of a corporation shall be prima facie evidence of assent by the corporation.

§ 35. What constitutes loans within the state. When an application for a loan, or for an endorsement or guarantee, or for the purchase of a note, is made by any person, association, partnership or corporation within this state and the money is advanced, or the endorsement or guarantee is made or furnished or the note purchased by any person, association, partnership or corporation situated without this state, the transaction shall be deemed to be a loan made within this state, and such loan and the parties making it, or taking such application, shall be subject to the provisions of this act.

§ 36. Personal loan associations heretofore organized. A personal loan association heretofore organized and subject to article ten of the banking law, as amended by chapter one hundred and twenty-seven of the laws of nineteen hundred and ten, is continued and shall be deemed duly organized under this act, notwithstanding the repeal of such article by this act, and such association, if lawfully engaged in business pursuant to a license duly issued by the superintendent of banks, is hereby authorized to continue in such business until the expiration of such license or until such license shall have been duly cancelled, as though such association had complied with all the provisions of this act, and until such date may exercise the powers conferred by this act upon personal loan companies. Prior to the expiration of such license such association may apply to the supervisor for an authorization certificate under this act, and if the supervisor be satisfied from examination and investigation made by him that such personal loan association has complied with the conditions precedent to commencing business imposed by section nine of this act, he shall, within thirty days after the filing of such application, issue under his hand and official seal, in triplicate, an authorization certificate in accordance with section eleven of this act; and thereupon such personal loan association shall become a duly authorized personal loan company.

§ 37. Definitions. As used in this act, the term "superintendent" means the superintendent of banks; the term "supervisor" means the supervisor of small loans.

§ 38. Laws repealed. The following laws and parts of laws are hereby repealed: Article ten of the banking law, as amended by chapter one hundred and twenty-seven of the laws of nineteen hundred and ten; article five-a of the general business law, as added by chapter five hundred and seventy-nine of the laws of nineteen hundred and thirteen.

§ 39. When to take effect. This act shall take effect immediately.

CURE FOR OLD AGE

A GOOD WAY TO CHEAT DEATH.

Old age can be cured. The prescription is a simple one. Mix open air and a hobby, shake well and take as many hours a day as possible. No one begins to age until he is bored, and the first gray hair comes when a man suddenly thinks to himself, "What's the use?" Then is the time when a hobby makes life interesting again.

There was an official on one of our great railroads who was retired at seventy. "He'll die now," said his friends kindly. But he didn't. Instead, he became interested in the wild flowers, and now he is too busy in looking for the ram's head orchid and trying to find a new station for the hart's tongue fern and tramping around in the woods and fields in all kinds of weather even to think of dying. Anyway, he would not have time until he's finished his monograph on the willows of the United States.

There is a woman in Baltimore, seventy-two years old, who years ago sought to forget a great sorrow by learning the butterflies. Her city home has become a rendezvous for entomologists all over the world and houses a famous collection. While her contemporaries are dozing their lives away in caps and easy chairs she spends her summers in the mountains and her winters in Florida with a butterfly net. Twenty-one new species to identify are her contribution to the lepidoptera, and she plans to live until the last goal of an entomologist is reached—the using of her single initial species.

An octet of men in Philadelphia, all well past their threescore years, some in business and some foot loose, belong to the same ornithological society. They are afield every day of the year, rain or shine, to watch the ever changing bird life. In the spring each prepares migrant sheets showing the arrivals of the hundred odd migrants that pass through every place every year. There is great rivalry as to who shall score the most warblers or identify the largest number of birds in one day. At present writing the oldest of the eight holds a record of seventy-five different kinds of birds seen or heard in one day between dawn and dark—one for each year of his age and one to grow on.

A man in North Carolina by the sudden death of two of his family was left alone with but little money, no friends and the cheering dictum from his doctor that he had only a year to live. To while away the few months still left to him as well as to help out his household expenses he took up the study of edible mushrooms. At the end of a year in the open he notified his indignant physician that he had become too much interested in his hobby to confirm his diagnosis. In ten years he has discovered, classified and tested 170 kinds of edible mushrooms and has published a book which is one of the standard authorities for mushroom eaters of the world.

Another septuagenarian attributes his long life to the stars. Confined to business during the day, he sought the open air at night and began to study the changing constellations and the perplexing planets. Then he found that with an opera glass he could detect their colors and reveled in the blue light of Vega, the green glare of Sirius, the rose red of Aldebaran, the flame color of Beteiguese and the strange shades of other gleaming sky kings. Finally he bought a small telescope. Now, at seventy, he has published a monograph on the double stars, besides a quaint little star guide that has interested thousands in his hobby.

None of the nature studies requires much money or time. A cheap illustrated guidebook, an opera glass and, if possible, some walks and talks with an expert, and you will learn almost immediately to identify a score or more of flowers, or birds, or constellations, or mushrooms, and you will have found a hobby on which you may ride away from Death.

Try it, young men, lest you grow old. Try it, old men, before you grow tired. Escape into the open from these narrow indoor days and learn the way to where the wild folk dwell. In their land you will find the help of the hills and hope wide as the world, and strength, and youth, and happiness. Try it.—Samuel Scoville, Jr., in Lippincott's.

Across the Atlantic.

The narrowest part of the Atlantic is between Brazil and Guinea, where the ocean is only about 1,800 miles wide. From Newfoundland to Ireland, the narrowest breadth north of the equator, is nearly twice as far. From New York to the nearest point of France is nearly three times as far.

The Lesser Evil.

"It's Mr. Boreleigh. I think I'll send him word I'm out."

"Won't the still, small voice reproach you?"

"Oh, yes, but I'd rather listen to the still, small voice than to Mr. Boreleigh's."—Boston Transcript.

The most deadly foe to success in the future is the inertia which springs from self satisfaction in the success of the past.

Section 1. Section forty-five of chapter fifty-seven of the laws of nineteen hundred and nine, entitled "An act relating to state charities, constituting chapter fifty-five of the consolidated laws," as amended by chapter one hundred and forty-nine of the laws of nineteen hundred and nine, and chapter nine of the laws of nineteen hundred and eleven, and chapter four hundred and five of the laws of nineteen hundred and eleven, and chapter six hundred and sixty-three of the laws of nineteen hundred and thirteen, is hereby amended to read as follows:

§ 45. Quarterly or monthly estimates of expenses; contingent fund. The superintendent or other managing officer of each of the state institutions reporting to the fiscal supervisor shall quarterly or monthly, and upon such day as the fiscal supervisor shall direct, cause to be prepared triplicate estimates, in such detail as may be required by the fiscal supervisor, of the expense required for the institution of which he has the supervision, for the ensuing quarter or month. He shall countersign and submit two of such triplicates to the fiscal supervisor and retain the other to be placed on file in the office of the institution. The fiscal supervisor shall cause such estimates to be revised either as to quantity or quality of supplies and the estimated cost thereof, and shall certify that he has carefully examined the same and that the articles contained in such estimate, as revised and approved by him, are actually required for the use of the institution and shall thereupon present such estimate and certificate to the comptroller. Upon the revision and approval of such estimate the comptroller shall authorize the board of managers, trustees or other managing officers of such institution to make drafts on him as the money may be required for the purposes mentioned in such estimates, which draft shall be paid on his warrant out of the funds in the treasury of the state appropriated for the support of such institution. In every such estimate there shall be a sum named, not to exceed two hundred and twenty-five quarterly, or seventy-five dollars as a monthly contingent fund, for which a minute detailed statement shall be made. No expenditures shall be made from such contingent fund, except in case of actual emergency requiring immediate action, or except for such articles as may be previously approved by the fiscal supervisor. The treasurer of any such institution shall pay no accounts unless they are contained in the estimate provided in this section and duly approved by the fiscal supervisor. Nor shall the treasury of any such institution named or referred to in this section pay accounts for supplies furnished to officers or employees, unless the same be drawn from the ordinary supplies provided for the general use of the institution. No persons, other than the officers and employees of such institution, and the families of the superintendents, medical officers, adjutants, quartermasters or stewards, necessarily residing therein, shall be allowed room and maintenance, except at a rate fixed by the state comptroller and the fiscal supervisor with the approval of the governor.

The superintendent of each of the state institutions reporting to the fiscal supervisor shall personally inspect and pass upon all articles abandoned for use, and report to the fiscal supervisor at such time and on such forms as may be directed by him.

Any general expenses necessarily and lawfully incurred by the fiscal supervisor for, or on account of one or more of the institutions reporting to him, shall be apportioned to such institution or institutions on the basis of the number of inmates, and included in the estimates of such institution or institutions in the manner provided by this section.

He shall annually, on or before the first Wednesday of January, transmit to the superintendent a report to the legislature of his activities, with such recommendations and suggestions as he may deem necessary.

§ 4. Organization certificate of personal loan company. Three or more persons, two of whom shall be citizens of the United States, and at least one of whom shall be a citizen of the state of New York, may form a corporation to be known as a "personal loan company." Such persons shall subscribe, acknowledge and submit to the supervisor at his office an organization certificate in duplicate, which shall specifically state:

§ 6. When designation of resident agent of personal loan broker required. A person who is not a resident of this state, or a partnership or unincorporated association, at least one member of which is not a resident of the state, shall not receive an authorization to transact business under this act unless such person, partnership or association shall file with the supervisor of personal loans, in a form approved by him, a designation of a resident agent within the state, upon whom all legal process may be served, in any proceeding arising under the provisions of this act, with the same effect as if served upon such person, partnership or incorporated association. Every such designation shall state the full name of the private and office or business address of the agent.

§ 7. Return of defective certificate; filing for examination. If a certificate of a personal loan company or personal loan broker fail to comply with the requirements of this act, the supervisor shall forthwith return such certificate for amendment, calling attention to defects therein. § 8. Investigation of proposed company or broker; refusal or approval; filing certificate. If the supervisor be satisfied that the persons named in the certificate filed for examination are of such character, responsibility and general fitness as to command confidence and warrant belief that the business of the proposed corporation or personal loan broker will be honestly and efficiently conducted in accordance with the intent and purposes of this act, and that the public convenience and advantage will be promoted by allowing such proposed company or personal loan broker to engage in business, he shall, within thirty days after the filing of such certificate for examination, endorse upon each of the duplicates thereof over his official signature the word "approved," or if he be not so satisfied the word "refused," with the date of such endorsement. In case of refusal he shall forthwith return one of the duplicates so endorsed to the proposed incorporators or personal loan broker from whom the certificate was received. In case of approval he shall forthwith give notice thereof to the proposed incorporators or personal loan broker, and file one of the duplicate certificates in his own office and the other in the office of the clerk of the county in which is located the place of business of such proposed company or personal loan broker.

§ 9. When corporate existence begins; conditions precedent to commencing business. When the supervisor shall have approved the organization certificate of a personal loan company, its corporate existence shall begin, and it shall have power to elect officers and transact such business as relates to its organization. 2. The bond submitted by it to the supervisor as required by this act shall have been approved by him;

3. The supervisor shall have duly issued to it the authorization certificate specified in this act.

§ 10. Bond. Every personal loan company and personal loan broker shall file with the supervisor a bond executed by a surety company authorized to transact business in this state, and in an amount equal to one-tenth of the capital stock of such company, or one-tenth the permanent capital of such broker, not less in any case than three thousand dollars, conditioned upon the faithful observance by such company or broker of the provisions of law and of this act and of the regulations made hereunder. Such bond shall be approved by the supervisor, and by its terms continue in full force for two years after such company or broker has ceased to transact business in this state, unless sooner released by the supervisor. Any person claiming to be injured by a violation of this act by a personal loan company or broker may, with the written consent of the supervisor, maintain an action upon the bond of such company or broker.

§ 11. Authorization certificate. If the supervisor be satisfied from examination and investigation made by him that a company or personal loan broker whose certificate he has approved and filed has complied with all the conditions precedent to commencing business imposed by this act, he shall, within sixty days after the filing of such certificate for examination, but in no case after the expiration of such period, issue under his hand and official seal in triplicate, an authorization certificate, stating that the company or personal loan broker named in such certificate has complied with the provisions of this act, and is authorized to transact the business specified in such certificate. One of such triplicates shall be transmitted to the company or personal loan broker, one shall be filed in the office of the supervisor and the third shall be filed by the supervisor in the county clerk's office of the county wherein the organization certificate of such company or the certificate of the personal loan broker shall have been filed by him. § 12. Display of authorization certificate. Every authorization certificate shall be kept posted at all times in a prominent place in the office of the personal loan company or broker.

§ 13. Revocation of authorization certificate. If the supervisor be satisfied that a personal loan company or personal loan broker to which he shall have issued an authorization certificate is violating any of the provisions of this act, or any of the regulations made hereunder, or is conducting its business in an unauthorized or unsafe manner, or is in an unsound or unsafe condition to transact its business, the supervisor may, over his official signature and seal of office, notify the holder thereof that the same is revoked. Such notice shall be executed in triplicate, and the supervisor shall forthwith transmit one copy to the holder of such certificate, file one in his office, and file the third in the office of the clerk of the county in which such authorization certificate shall have been filed. The supervisor may, in his discretion, publish a copy of such notice, with such other facts as he may deem proper, for six successive days in the paper published at Albany in which public notices of the state are required to be published.

§ 14. General powers of personal loan company or broker. Every personal loan company shall have the powers conferred by the general corporation law and the business corporations law, including the powers to make loans in its discretion at the legal rate of interest, and every such company and every personal loan broker, subject to the limitations contained in this act, may, when authorized by the supervisor,

1. Act as a pawnbroker without being required to obtain a license or file a bond other than the authorization certificate and bond required by this act;

2. Make small loans to necessitous borrowers upon any of the following securities:

(a) Mortgages upon personal property without the actual delivery of the property,

(b) Notes of the borrower endorsed or guaranteed by another person,

(c) An assignment or order for the payment of salary or wages by the borrower or another person, subject to the provisions of this act.

3. Charge interest upon loans made in accordance with the provisions of subdivisions one and two of this section, subject to the conditions and limitations of this act.

1. No loan made under subdivisions one and two of section fourteen of this act shall exceed two hundred dollars, nor shall any person owe such company or loan broker more than two hundred dollars for principal at any one time;

2. Interest on loans made as a pawnbroker shall not exceed three per centum per month, and no charge of any kind shall be made by such company or broker when acting as a pawnbroker;

3. Interest on loans made as provided in subdivision two of section fourteen of this act shall not be charged at a rate to exceed two per centum per month;

4. Interest shall not be charged or collected in advance and shall be computed only on unpaid balances;

5. For a loan exceeding fifty dollars there may be made, except in case of loan made as pawnbroker, a charge of not more than two dollars for examination or investigation of the property mortgaged or investigation of the character and circumstances of the borrower, endorser or surety, and for all other expenses including the drawing and filing of necessary papers. If the loan be fifty dollars or less such charge shall not be more than one dollar. No such charge shall be made on any loan or renewal thereof oftener than once in each period of twelve months.

6. No such charge shall be imposed upon any one borrower for any new or additional loan made within three months after any such charge has been imposed;

7. No charge whatsoever shall be made unless or until a loan shall have been made as a result of an examination;

8. No charge shall be made for the collection of debts except the legal costs in actions to enforce the security or upon the entry of judgment.

1. Upon repayment of the loan in full, mark indelibly in the presence of the borrower every paper signed by him with the word "paid" or "canceled" and discharge any mortgages, restore any pledges, return any notes, and cancel any assignments given by the borrower as security;

2. Furnish the borrower at the time the loan is made a statement in the English language showing in clear and distinct terms the amount of the loan, the date of the loan, the security of the loan, the person to whom the loan is made, the name of the lender and the amount and rate of interest charged. Upon such statement there shall be printed in English a copy of section fifteen of this act;

3. Give to the borrower a plain and complete receipt for all payments made on account of the loan at the time such payments are made, and shall not take any confession of judgment, any power of attorney or any instrument that does not state the actual amount of the loan in question, the time for which it is made and the rate of interest, or any instrument in which blanks are left to be filled after execution;

4. Take every mortgage, note assignment, agreement or contract, in connection with such business in the name of the company or in the name of the individual broker, with the addition in the case of such individual of the descriptive words "personal loan broker."

§ 17. Restrictions on assignment of wages or salary. An assignment or order for the payment of future salary or wages given as security for a loan shall be valid for a period not exceeding one year from the making of such assignment or order, and a sum not exceeding ten per centum of the borrower's salary or wages shall be collectible therefrom under such an assignment or order at the time of each payment of salary or wages, if the amount of the loan shall not have been paid. Such assignment or order shall not be subject to the provisions of section forty-two of the personal property law. If such assignment or order be made by a married man or woman living at the time the assignment or order is made, or at any time within five months prior thereto, with the wife or husband, as the case may be, the assignment or order shall be accompanied by the written assent of the wife or the husband of the assignor, or the assignment or order shall be invalid.

1. Transact or solicit business under any other name or at any other office or place than that designated in the authorization certificate issued to such company or broker, except as provided in section nineteen of this act;

2. Maintain an office or place of business in the same room in which any other business is transacted or in a room connected with or opening into a room in which any other business is conducted.

§ 19. Branch offices. A personal loan broker shall not establish any branch office or offices. A personal loan company located and doing business in a city of the first or second class may open and occupy one or more branch offices, upon obtaining the approval of the supervisor by certificate filed in his office and in the office of the county clerk of the county in which the certificate of authorization of such company is filed. Every such company shall have a capital of ten thousand dollars for every branch office established, in addition to the capital required by this act.

§ 20. Restriction on payment of dividends by personal loan company. Every personal loan company may pay a dividend on its capital stock, subject to the following conditions and limitations:

1. In determining net profits no more than a reasonable deduction shall be made for expenses, including salaries;

2. The total dividends declared in any one year shall not amount to more than twelve per centum of the capital;

3. If the net profits amount to more than twelve per centum of its capital, such personal loan company shall comply with any order of the supervisor reducing the rates of interest or charges which may be made by it.

§ 21. Restriction on profits of personal loan broker. A personal loan broker shall not in any year pay or take out of his business profits amounting to more than twelve per centum of the capital invested in the business, provided that a reasonable deduction may be made for expenses and salaries, including his own services. The supervisor, upon ascertaining that any such broker has during the previous calendar year, made a net profit amounting to more than twelve per centum of his capital, shall have authority, after ten days' notice to such broker, to make an order reducing the interest and charges which such broker may lawfully make to such an extent as will, in his judgment, yield a net annual profit of not more than twelve per centum of the capital.

§ 22. Change of location. A personal loan company or personal loan broker may, with the approval of the supervisor, change the place of business authorized in its authorization certificate to another place in the same town, village or borough or city if a city be not divided into boroughs. Authority for such change shall be evidenced by a certificate of the supervisor filed in his office and in the office of the county clerk of the county in which the authorization certificate of such company or broker is filed.

§ 23. Examinations. The supervisor shall, either personally or by examiners of the banking department, examine every personal loan company and broker at least once each year, and oftener if deemed necessary or expedient. On every such examination inquiry shall be made as to the condition and resources, the mode of conducting and managing affairs, the action of its directors, if a corporation, the investment of its funds, the safety and prudence of its management, the security afforded to those by whom its engagements are held, whether the requirements of the authorization certificate and of law have been complied with, and as to such other matters as the supervisor may prescribe. For the purposes of any such examination the supervisor shall have free access to the vaults, books, securities and papers of the company or broker so examined. The supervisor and every such examiner shall have power to administer an oath to any person whose testimony may be required on the examination of any such company or personal loan broker, whether in any way connected with such company or broker or not, and to compel the appearance and attendance of any such person for the purpose of any such examination. If the examination shall be made by the supervisor, or by one or more examiners who are compensated by salary only, no examination charge shall be made except for necessary traveling and other actual expenses.

§ 24. Reports of examiners. Every examiner shall make a written report on oath to the supervisor of the result of his examination. Such reports shall be confidential communications and shall not be made public, unless in the judgment of the supervisor, the ends of justice or the public advantage will be served by the publication thereof, in which event he may publish a copy of any such report or any part thereof in at least one daily newspaper published in the county where the principal place of business of such company or personal loan broker is located, or in such other manner as he may deem proper.

§ 25. Reports to supervisors; penalty for failure to make. On or before the first day of February in each year, every personal loan company and broker shall make a written report to the supervisor which shall contain a statement of its condition on the morning of the first day of January in said year, in the form and contain the matters prescribed by the supervisor.

Every such report shall be verified by the oaths of the president and secretary of such company, or by such personal loan broker. The verification shall state that the report is true and correct in all respects to the best of the knowledge and belief of the person or persons verifying it, and that the usual business of the company or broker has been transacted at the location required by this act and not elsewhere.

Every such company and broker shall also make any other special reports to the supervisor which he may from time to time require, which shall be in such form and filed at such date as may be prescribed by the supervisor and shall, if required by him, be verified in such manner as he may prescribe.

Every such company within ten days after declaring a dividend, shall make written report to the supervisor stating the amount of such dividend, and the amount of its net earnings in excess thereof. Such report shall be verified by the oath of the president or treasurer of the company.

If any such company or broker shall fail to make any report required by this section on or before the day designated for the making thereof, or shall fail to include therein any matter required by the supervisor, it shall forfeit to the people of the state the sum of one hundred dollars for every day that such report shall be delayed or withheld, and for every day that it shall fail to report any such omitted matter, unless the time therefor shall have been extended by the supervisor.

§ 26. Orders of supervisor to delinquent personal loan companies or brokers. 1. To discontinue unlawful or unsafe practices. Whenever it shall appear to the supervisor that any personal loan company or broker to which this act is applicable has violated the certificate of authorization or any law or regulation or is conducting its business in an unauthorized or unsafe manner, he may issue an order directing the discontinuance of such unauthorized or unsafe practices and require the delinquent to appear before him at a time fixed in the order to explain such practices.

2. To make good impairment of capital. Whenever it shall appear to the supervisor that capital stock of any such company or the permanent capital of any such broker has been reduced in value below the requirements of law or of its certificate of authorization, he may issue an order directing that such company or broker make good such deficiency within sixty days from the date of such order.

3. To keep books and accounts as prescribed. Whenever it shall appear to the supervisor that any personal loan company or broker does not keep its books and accounts in such manner as to enable him readily to ascertain its true condition, he may issue an order requiring such company or broker, or the officers or agents thereof, or any of them, to open and keep such books or accounts *as he may, in his discretion, determine and prescribe the manner for keeping accurate and convenient records of the transactions and accounts of such company or broker.

§ 27. Publications. No personal loan company or personal loan broker shall print, publish or distribute, or cause to be printed, published or distributed, any written or printed statement with regard to the rates, terms or conditions for the lending of money which is false or calculated to deceive. Every personal loan company or personal loan broker, authorized by the supervisor to transact business under this act, shall include a statement of such fact as a part of every advertisement of the business of such company or broker. Any person, partnership or company violating this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

§ 28. Priority of assessments, penalties and forfeitures. In case of the insolvency or voluntary or involuntary liquidation of any company or broker to which this act is applicable, all unpaid charges lawfully assessed by the supervisor, and all unpaid penalties or forfeitures incurred under this act, shall be entitled to priority of payment from the assets of such company or broker.

§ 29. Communications from supervisor. Every official communication directed by the supervisor to a personal loan company, or to any officer thereof, relating to an investigation or examination conducted by him, or containing suggestions or recommendations as to the conduct of the business of such company, shall be submitted by the officer receiving it to the board of directors at its next meeting, and recorded in its book of minutes.

§ 30. Investigations by supervisor. The supervisor shall have power to investigate all violations or alleged violations of this act, that come to his attention, shall make all reasonable efforts to discover the same and shall notify the proper prosecuting officer whenever he has reasonable grounds to believe that a violation has occurred. He shall act as complainant in prosecutions under this act and shall otherwise assist in the prosecution of violators thereof.

§ 31. Offender a competent witness. A person violating any provision of this act is a competent witness against any other person so violating this act, and may be compelled to attend and testify upon any trial, hearing or proceeding, or investigation, in the same manner as any other person. But the testimony so given shall not be used in any prosecution or proceeding, civil or criminal, against the person so testifying; nor shall a person so testifying be thereafter liable to indictment, prosecution or punishment for such violation, and may plead or prove the giving of testimony accordingly, in bar of such indictment or prosecution.

§ 32. Penalty for collection of illegal interest or charges. No person or corporation other than persons or corporations transacting business pursuant to the provisions of this act, shall directly or indirectly charge or receive any interest, discount or consideration greater than the legal rate of interest upon the loan, use or forbearance of money, goods or things in action of the value of two hundred dollars or less, or upon the loan, use or sale of personal credit in any wise, where there is taken for such loan, use or sale of personal credit any security upon any household furniture, apparatus or appliances, sewing machine, plate or silver ware in actual use, tools or implements of trade, wearing apparel or jewelry.

The foregoing prohibition shall apply to any person who, as security for any such loan, use or forbearance of money, or for any such loan, use or sale of personal credit as aforesaid, makes a pretended purchase of property from any person and permits the owner or pledgor to retain the possession thereof, or who, by any device or pretense of charging for his services or otherwise, seeks to obtain a larger compensation in any case hereinbefore provided for.

Any person, and the several officers of any corporation, who shall violate the foregoing prohibition, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon proof of such fact the debt shall be discharged and the security shall be void. But this section shall not apply to licensed pawnbrokers, making loans upon the actual and permanent deposit of personal property as security; nor shall this section affect the validity or legality of any loan of money or credit exceeding two hundred dollars in amount.

§ 33. Penalty for unlawfully engaging in personal loan business. No person or corporation shall, except as authorized by this act, make any loans, endorsements or guarantees, either directly or indirectly, in sums of two hundred dollars or less, for which loans, endorsements or guarantees any charge, interest, discount or consideration is made or taken in excess of six per centum per annum. No individual, partnership, unincorporated association or corporation shall, directly or indirectly, engage or offer to engage in the business of negotiating or arranging any transaction herein prohibited, or aiding the borrower or lender either to procure or to make any such loans. A violation of any of the provisions of this section shall be a misdemeanor, whether or not such loans are actually made.

Any person or corporation purchasing or discounting such notes or loans of two hundred dollars or less, or endorsing, guaranteeing or becoming surety for the payment of any such notes or loans for compensation or for value of any kind, or furnishing security therefor or procuring any endorser, guarantor or surety therefor, for compensation or value of any kind, without having been first authorized so to do under the provisions of this act, shall be presumed to have violated the provisions of this section.

§ 34. Evidence of violations. Violation by an agent shall be prima facie evidence of assent by his principal. Violation by a member of a partnership shall be prima facie evidence of assent by each member of the partnership. Violation by a director, trustee, an officer or agent of a corporation shall be prima facie evidence of assent by the corporation.

§ 36. Personal loan associations heretofore organized. A personal loan association heretofore organized and subject to article ten of the banking law, as amended by chapter one hundred and twenty-seven of the laws of nineteen hundred and ten, is continued and shall be deemed duly organized under this act, notwithstanding the repeal of such article by this act, and such association, if lawfully engaged in business pursuant to a license duly issued by the superintendent of banks, is hereby authorized to continue in such business until the expiration of such license or until such license shall have been duly cancelled, as though such association had complied with all the provisions of this act, and until such date may exercise the powers conferred by this act upon personal loan companies. Prior to the expiration of such license such association may apply to the supervisor for an authorization certificate under this act, and if the supervisor be satisfied from examination and investigation made by him that such personal loan association has complied with the conditions precedent to commencing business imposed by section nine of this act, he shall, within thirty days after the filing of such application, issue under his hand and official seal, in triplicate, an authorization certificate in accordance with section eleven of this act; and thereupon such personal loan association shall become a duly authorized personal loan company.

§ 37. Definitions. As used in this act, the term "superintendent" means the superintendent of banks; the term "supervisor" means the supervisor of small loans.

The following laws and parts of laws are hereby repealed: Article ten of the banking law, as amended by chapter one hundred and twenty-seven of the laws of nineteen hundred and ten; article five-a of the general business law, as added by chapter five hundred and seventy-nine of the laws of nineteen hundred and thirteen.

§ 39. When to take effect. This act shall take effect immediately.

CITIZENS' LEAGUE DETECTIVE BROKE

Under Sheriff Archie McLaughlin sold at public auction this morning the stock and fixtures of the confectionery store of William L. Williams in the Orpheum Theater on Broadway. The store was closed by the sheriff a few days ago on a judgment obtained against Mr. Williams by Hiram Tappan of North Front street. The stock and fixtures which were inventoried at $65, were sold to Benjamin Mufson for $26. Mr. Williams in his spare moments used to do detective work for the Citizens' League in the county and while the Rev. William Pringle was superintendent of the local league Mr. Williams did considerable work for him both in this city and in the county. After the store was closed by the sheriff, Mr. Williams left town and it is now thought that he is located in Yonkers.

VILLA CAN NEVER BE MEXICAN PRESIDENT.

(Gen. Pancho Villa.)

New York, July 25.—"Will Jack Johnson ever be president of the United States?" asked Former Minister of Foreign Affairs under Huerta Moheno when he was questioned as to whether Villa would be Mexico's next dictator. "Well, Villa is so ignorant that he couldn't hold any government position. Villa is a bandit. As a fighter he can get a good deal of support, but as a political figure—none. Of course, if Carranza bows down to him he may actually control the running of the government for a while, but he will always have to be behind a screen."

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTS REVIEW

New York, July 25.—This is a story of how the 1914 pennant chances of the Cleveland American League team were practically wrecked by cupidity that resulted in saving about $1,000.

It is a story, too, of how Charles W. Somers, the Cleveland magnate stands to suffer a loss of $100,000 this season instead of making a profit of from $100,000 to $300,000, all because he wanted to dole out a small reward to a pitcher whose brilliant work during the 1913 season kept the Naps in the fight all the way and enabled the club to clear something like $150,000.

* * * *

"Cy" Falkenberg was the hurler who kept the Naps in the 1913 pennant fight. He won the first ten games pitched and finished the season with an average near the top. Such work, in Falkenberg's mind, and in that of every fair minded fan, was deserving of a sizeable boost in pay.

Did Falkenberg get it? Nay, Nay. Somers instead of giving Falkenberg a boost of about $1,500 a year, offered him an increase that amounted to about $1.53 a day, according to Falkenberg and which statement Somers does not deny.

* * * *

Falkenberg, disgusted, jumped to the Feds. They made him an offer far in excess of that of Somers. They recognized worth and were willing to pay the full price. Falkenberg's heart had been in his work in Cleveland. He would have preferred to remain there, and undoubtedly would have remained on the Naps' roster if Somers had offered about $1,000 more. But Somers didn't. He overlooked the fact that the Federal League was a haven for the underpaid stars.

* * * *

With Falkenberg on the firing line for Cleveland this year and pitching in anywhere near his 1913 form, the Naps now would be in a pennant fight instead of hopelessly in the rut. The deplorable weakness of its pitching staff has kept the Clevelanders in the cellar practically from the outset of the season. Outside of Gregg they haven't a dependable pitcher and the demoralized condition of the pitching staff has disheartened the entire team. It has taken the fight and spirit out of them. They have come to feel that no matter how brilliantly they field, no matter how terrific their batting, the moundman cannot hold the opposition in check.

If Falkenberg had been with the Naps, he would have been good for at least ten victories that have resulted in defeats for the Naps. Manager Birmingham, with Falkenberg on his staff, would not have called on his kid twirlers so often. He wouldn't have to experiment so much. The result would have been that at least ten of the games that have been lost would have been won by Falkenberg.

Furthermore, if the Naps had won those ten games instead of losing them, it would have enthused instead of disheartened them. They would have played better baseball and fought harder, and, no doubt, would have won at least six of the other games that they have thrown away by indifferent work.

Think of what a difference this would have made to the Naps! July 5 is regarded as the half way mark in the baseball season. This year it found the Naps with a standing of 25 games won and 46 lost, for a percentage of .352.

If Falkenberg had been with them and those 16 games had been won instead of being thrown away by miserable pitching and inconsistent, featureless playing, the standing of the Naps on July 5 would have been 41 games won and 31 lost, for a percentage of .569. This would have put them just a jump behind the league-leading Athletics—and with a fine chance for world's series honors.

* * * *

When a club is down in the race the turnstiles feel the effect. The attendance at most of the games in Cleveland this year has been the smallest in the history of big league baseball in the Ohio City. It is reported that on many days the paid attendance had fallen below the 1,000 mark, and that one day it reached only 210. As a road attraction they are no better.

What a different story might have been written had Somers offered Falkenberg a boost of $1,500, or even $1,000 over his 1913 salary—a boost that he seemed to have earned.

Walker Cigar Factory Running.

Although the Interstate cigar factory building on Broadway was recently sold for the site of the new theater to be erected by Lew Fischer of Catskill, one of the buildings in the rear of it is still being used by J. E. M. Walker for the manufacture of the cigar that bears the name formed by his initials. Mr. Walker said this morning when asked as to his plans for the future that he had not decided as yet where he would locate. Mr. Walker with George J. Smith was one of the organizers of the Anglo American Cigar Company, but owing to lack of room business has been carried on on a small scale.

In order to have everything in readiness for the enormous crowds that will throng their front doors before opening time at 8:30 on Saturday morning, August 1, they are going to close their store Friday in order that their large and efficient salesforce can mark down the goods and place them in convenient places to accommodate their patrons. $150,000 RACE HORSE DIES.

Rock Sand.

Paris, July 24.—Racing enthusiasts are today lamenting the death of Rock Sand, the famous racing stallion, formerly the property of August Belmont. In 1906 Mr. Belmont paid $125,000 for the horse, and in 1912 sold him to a syndicate of Frenchmen and Americans for $150,000. Rock Sand was three times the winner of the English Derby. He was 14 years old when he died.

The Neidergesasse Claim.

The Washington avenue viaduct commission composed of Messrs. Hasbrouck, Duffy and Thompson, met at the court house on Friday morning to try the claim of Mrs. Clara D. Neidergesasse. Judge Van Etten appeared for the claimant and William D. Brinnier for the city, Harry Flemming for the Ulster and Delaware, and Philip Eiting for the Ontario and Western. Mrs. Neidergesasse took the stand and said that she was the owner of the property and had paid $6,400 for it. Same time ago the property was damaged by fire to the extent of $2,500 which she had received from the insurance company. Mr. Brinnier claims that this amount should be taken from the value of the property. Mr. Van Etten said that they did not except the city to pay for the damages that the fire had done as they had already received that.

Mr. Halloran, former city engineer, was called and produced a map that he had made of the property. Albert Mauterstock was qualified as a real estate expert and valued the property at $6,000 before the commencement of the construction and between $800 and $1,000 after the fire, and the completion of the viaduct. Schuyler C. Schultz gave the same values of the parcel as did Mr. Mauterstock. Mr. Schultz's testimony closed the case for the claimant.

Addison E. Dederick was the first expert called for the city, and said that he had testified in 750 cases for the city of New York in the Ashokan dam construction, and in reply to Judge Van Etten's question as to whether or not this fact had not warped his judgment as to the real value of property in this city, said that he was sure that it had not. He valued the property at $2,500 before the construction of the viaduct and $1,900 after. Michael A. Reis, who was the city assessor in 1901, gave the same values as did Mr. Dederick. In 1901 he assessed the property at $800, but believed that property had improved since then in that vicinity.

This closed the case and an adjournment was taken until Wednesday, July 29.

Nothing Doing.

A little four-year-old, a most attractive little fairy, suddenly lost interest in Sunday school. She had enjoyed so much learning about Moses that her mother could not understand the change of attitude.

"Why don't you want to go, daughter?" she asked.

"Oh," was the astonishing reply, "I don't 'ike to go to Sunday school since Moses died."—Woman's Home Companion.

To Seal Bottles.

Bottles may be securely sealed in the following manner: Melt together a quarter of a pound of sealing wax, the same quantity of resin and two ounces of beeswax. When the mixture froths, stir it with a tallow candle. As soon as each ingredient is melted, dip the tops of the corked bottles in the mixture. It will completely exclude the air.

CITIZENS' LEAGUE DETECTIVE BROKE

Under Sheriff Archie McLaughlin sold at public auction this morning the stock and fixtures of the confectionery store of William L. Williams in the Orpheum Theater on Broadway. The store was closed by the sheriff a few days ago on a judgment obtained against Mr. Williams by Hiram Tappan of North Front street. The stock and fixtures which were inventoried at $65, were sold to Benjamin Mufson for $36. Mr. Williams in his spare moments used to do detective work for the Citizens' League in the county and while the Rev. William Pringle was superintendent of the local league Mr. Williams did considerable work for him both in this city and in the county. After the store was closed by the sheriff, Mr. Williams left town and it is now thought that he is located in Yonkers.

VILLA CAN NEVER BE MEXICAN PRESIDENT.

(Gen. Pancho Villa.)

New York, July 25.—"Will Jack Johnson ever be president of the United States?" asked Former Minister of Foreign Affairs under Huerta Moheno when he was questioned as to whether Villa would be Mexico's next dictator. "Well, Villa is so ignorant that he couldn't hold any government position. Villa is a bandit. As a fighter he can get a good deal of support, but as a political figure—none. Of course, if Carranza bows down to him he may actually control the running of the government for a while, but he will always have to be behind a screen."

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTS REVIEW

New York, July 25.—This is a story of how the 1914 pennant chances of the Cleveland American League team were practically wrecked by cupidity that resulted in saving about $1,000.

It is a story, too, of how Charles W. Somers, the Cleveland magnate stands to suffer a loss of $100,000 this season instead of making a profit of from $100,000 to $300,000, all because he wanted to dole out a small reward to a pitcher whose brilliant work during the 1913 season kept the Naps in the fight all the way and enabled the club to clear something like $150,000.

* * * *

"Cy" Falkenberg was the hurler who kept the Naps in the 1913 pennant fight. He won the first ten games pitched and finished the season with an average near the top. Such work, in Falkenberg's mind, and in that of every fair minded fan, was deserving of a sizeable boost in pay.

Did Falkenberg get it? Nay, Nay. Somers instead of giving Falkenberg a boost of about $1,500 a year, offered him an increase that amounted to about $1.53 a day, according to Falkenberg and which statement Somers does not deny.

* * * *

Falkenberg, disgusted, jumped to the Feds. They made him an offer far in excess of that of Somers. They recognized worth and were willing to pay the full price. Falkenberg's heart had been in his work in Cleveland. He would have preferred to remain there, and undoubtedly would have remained on the Naps' roster if Somers had offered about $1,000 more. But Somers didn't. He overlooked the fact that the Federal League was a haven for the underpaid stars.

* * * *

With Falkenberg on the firing line for Cleveland this year and pitching in anywhere near his 1913 form, the Naps now would be in a pennant fight instead of hopelessly in the rut. The deplorable weakness of its pitching staff has kept the Clevelanders in the cellar practically from the outset of the season. Outside of Gregg they haven't a dependable pitcher and the demoralized condition of the pitching staff has disheartened the entire team. It has taken the fight and spirit out of them. They have come to feel that no matter how brilliantly they field, no matter how terrific their batting, the moundman cannot hold the opposition in check.

If Falkenberg had been with the Naps, he would have been good for at least ten victories that have resulted in defeats for the Naps. Manager Birmingham, with Falkenberg on his staff, would not have called on his kid twirlers so often. He wouldn't have to experiment so much. The result would have been that at least ten of the games that have been lost would have been won by Falkenberg.

Furthermore, if the Naps had won those ten games instead of losing them, it would have enthused instead of disheartened them. They would have played better baseball and fought harder, and, no doubt, would have won at least six of the other games that they have thrown away by indifferent work.

Think of what a difference this would have made to the Naps! July 5 is regarded as the half way mark in the baseball season. This year it found the Naps with a standing of 25 games won and 46 lost, for a percentage of .352.

If Falkenberg had been with them and those 16 games had been won instead of being thrown away by miserable pitching and inconsistent, featureless playing, the standing of the Naps on July 5 would have been 41 games won and 31 lost, for a percentage of .569. This would have put them just a jump behind the league-leading Athletics—and with a fine chance for world's series honors.

* * * *

When a club is down in the race the turnstiles feel the effect. The attendance at most of the games in Cleveland this year has been the smallest in the history of big league baseball in the Ohio City. It is reported that on many days the paid attendance had fallen below the 1,000 mark, and that one day it reached only 210. As a road attraction they are no better.

What a different story might have been written had Somers offered Falkenberg a boost of $1,500, or even $1,000 over his 1913 salary—a boost that he seemed to have earned.

Walker Cigar Factory Running.

Although the Interstate cigar factory building on Broadway was recently sold for the site of the new theater to be erected by Lew Fischer of Catskill, one of the buildings in the rear of it is still being used by J. E. M. Walker for the manufacture of the cigar that bears the name formed by his initials. Mr. Walker said this morning when asked as to his plans for the future that he had not decided as yet where he would locate. Mr. Walker with George J. Smith was one of the organizers of the Anglo American Cigar Company, but owing to lack of room business has been carried on on a small scale.

$150,000 RACE HORSE DIES.

Rock Sand.

Paris, July 24.—Racing enthusiasts are today lamenting the death of Rock Sand, the famous racing stallion, formerly the property of August Belmont. In 1906 Mr. Belmont paid $125,000 for the horse, and in 1912 sold him to a syndicate of Frenchmen and Americans for $150,000. Rock Sand was three times the winner of the English Derby. He was 14 years old when he died.

The Neidergesasse Claim.

The Washington avenue viaduct commission composed of Messrs. Hasbrouck, Duffy and Thompson, met at the court house on Friday morning to try the claim of Mrs. Clara D. Neidergesasse. Judge Van Etten appeared for the claimant and William D. Brinnier for the city, Harry Flemming for the Ulster and Delaware, and Philip Elting for the Ontario and Western. Mrs. Neidergesasse took the stand and said that she was the owner of the property and had paid $6,400 for it. Same time ago the property was damaged by fire to the extent of $2,500 which she had received from the insurance company. Mr. Brinnier claims that this amount should be taken from the value of the property. Mr. Van Etten said that they did not except the city to pay for the damages that the fire had done as they had already received that.

Mr. Halloran, former city engineer, was called and produced a map that he had made of the property. Albert Mauterstock was qualified as a real estate expert and valued the property at $6,000 before the commencement of the construction and between $800 and $1,000 after the fire, and the completion of the viaduct. Schuyler C. Schultz gave the same values of the parcel as did Mr. Mauterstock. Mr. Schultz's testimony closed the case for the claimant.

Addison E. Dederick was the first expert called for the city, and said that he had testified in 750 cases for the city of New York in the Ashokan dam construction, and in reply to Judge Van Etten's question as to whether or not this fact had not warped his judgment as to the real value of property in this city, said that he was sure that it had not. He valued the property at $2,500 before the construction of the viaduct and $1,900 after. Michael A. Reis, who was the city assessor in 1901, gave the same values as did Mr. Dederick. In 1901 he assessed the property at $800, but believed that property had improved since then in that vicinity.

This closed the case and an adjournment was taken until Wednesday, July 29.

Nothing Doing.

A little four-year-old, a most attractive little fairy, suddenly lost interest in Sunday school. She had enjoyed so much learning about Moses that her mother could not understand the change of attitude.

"Why don't you want to go, daughter?" she asked.

"Oh," was the astonishing reply, "I don't like to go to Sunday school since Moses died."—Woman's Home Companion.

Her Telltale Lips.

"You have been kissing another man."

"You have no right to say that," declared the girl.

"Then I withdraw it. But I preferred to believe that than to think you had been chewing tobacco."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

To Seal Bottles.

Bottles may be securely sealed in the following manner: Melt together a quarter of a pound of sealing wax, the same quantity of resin and two ounces of beeswax. When the mixture froths, stir it with a tallow candle. As soon as each ingredient is melted, dip the tops of the corked bottles in the mixture. It will completely exclude the air.

Proof of It.

She—"Men aren't any brainier than women; they have only fooled us into believing that they are." He—"Well, doesn't that show that they are?"—Boston Evening Transcript.
